Roosevelt Requests Congress Approval for 60-Cent Dollar And Seizure of Reserve Gold

Prof. Sprague Testifies at Dollar Revaluation Hearing

Claims 4-Billion Profit Would Accrue to Treasury.

Stocks and Bonds Rise; Sales Boom

Bill Would Permit Cut in Dollar to Half Its Value.

By Elliott Thurston.

By special message, accompanied by the Treasury's draft of a bill, President Roosevelt called upon Congress yesterday to stamp approval on the epochal steps he now plans to take to commandeer $3,566,000,000 of Federal Reserve system gold, revalue it to make the gold dollar worth 60 cents, with leeway to cut it down to 50 cents, and to net the Treasury from $3,400,000,000 to $4,200,000,000 of "profit," of which $2,000,000,000 will become a "stabilization fund."

By these swift new approaches to Prof. George F. Warren's commodity dollar conceptions of a managed currency, Mr. Roosevelt heralded an immediate 40-cent cut in the dollar's gold value, paved the way for varying gold content "from time to time" between a 60-cent and 50-cent dollar, and for putting the country permanently upon a gold bullion basis, ending gold coinage, possibly absorbing more silver to provide a "symmetallic" monetary base.

Sees Edge Over Foreigners.

Strategically, the White House envisions these momentous moves as advantaging the United States in negotiating for exchange agreements with the British and French and as narrowing to the 10-cent leeway the uncertainty over the dollar's gold value.

Mr. Roosevelt will be in position to say to the British that Congress will not permit him to agree to more than a 60-cent dollar. The British have wanted one as near to its old gold parity as possible. If foreign currencies are devalued further with the idea of giving them an edge over the United States in international trade, Mr. Roosevelt has the 10-cent margin with which to trade or counter, and the "stabilization" fund to pit against Britain's $1,800,000,000 "equalization" fund.

Faced with $10,000,000,000 of Treasury financing and hopeful of raising it by "borrowing," the Administration believes removal of all but "10 per cent" of the uncertainty about gold content will cause private capital to flow more freely into Treasury issues as well as into lagging private enterprise.

As expected, the first effect of the

Pilot Is Blinded In Heavy Snow

Ship Returning After Maiden Flight to Orient.

Corbigny, France, Jan. 15 (AP). Ten persons, including Gov. Gen. Pierre du Pasquier of French Indo-China and four high officials of the French air ministry, were burned to death tonight when their airplane, the Emeraude, crashed and burst into flames near here.

Besides Du Pasquier, the other victims were Director Emmanuel Chaumie, of civil aviation; his special assistants, M. Nogues and M. Larrieux; M. Balazuc, director of technical air service; Capt. Bussault, aid to M. Pasquier, Mme Chaumie, and three members of the crew, Pilot Launey, Wireless Operator Queyrel and Mechanic Campbell.

The trimotored ship was returning from its maiden flight inaugurating the France-Indo-China line. It exploded and was engulfed by flames as the pilot tried to land in an open field 175 miles southeast of Paris.

The craft was destroyed and all occupants burned almost beyond recognition.

Rescue workers took six bodies from the wreckage two hours later.

The Emeraude was believed forced down by a snowstorm. The accident occurred at 7:20 p. m.

The plane left Marseilles at 3:10 p. m. for Le Bourget Field on the last stage of a long flight from the Orient. It left Le Bourget December 21 with the air ministry officials aboard and started its return to France January 5.

An hour after leaving Lyon, the wireless operator sent a message that the plane, at 6:10 p. m., was battling "a tempest and snow."

Everything was destroyed by the flames except a few papers from Pasquier's brief cases which the Mayor of Corbigny found when the fire had abated.

It was indicated that Insull would make a further fight against a return to Chicago.

Admiral Raby Dies in Georgia Highway Crash

Former Commandant of Navy Yard Killed Beneath Car.

Rear Admiral James J. Raby, U. S. N., outstanding naval research expert, aviator and former commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, was killed yesterday afternoon when his automobile overturned near Savannah, Ga., according to Associated Press dispatches. He was 59 years old.

Mrs. E. P. Abernethy, wife of Lieut. E. P. Abernethy, Admiral Raby's aid, was injured seriously and taken to a Savannah hospital. Lieut. Abernethy was driving the car.

The accident occurred, dispatches said, when the car carrying the naval officers was passing another machine on the Coastal highway. The admiral's party was en route to Charleston, S. C., from a visit to Florida. Admiral Raby was commandant of Sixth Naval District at Charleston and was under recent orders to take command of the Twelfth Naval District at Mare Island, Calif.

Commandant 4 Years.

A long and distinguished naval career lay behind Admiral Raby. He was commandant of the Navy Yard here from 1919 to 1923.

Among outstanding nautical accomplishments of Admiral Raby was that of taking the deepest known sounding—5,269 feet off Guam.

Admiral Raby commanded the first American naval escort of a merchant convoy during the World War, escorted the largest number of ships to Europe and commanded the U. S. S. Georgia, first battleship to bring soldiers back from France.

At the age of 51, Admiral Raby became a qualified naval aviator and until 1928 was the only admiral who had achieved this status.

Admiral Since 1927.

Born in Michigan, Admiral Raby graduated from the Naval Academy in 1895. Advancing through the Navy grades, he became a captain in 1919 and November 1, 1927, was appointed a rear admiral.

Prior to assuming command of the Navy Yard here, Admiral Raby was assigned to the Naval Operations Office in the Navy Department. At various periods during his career he served as instructor in various subjects at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Admiral Raby was married in 1897 to Jane Callahan, of San Francisco. He had two daughters, Mrs. Lawrence V. Castner, wife of Lieut. Lawrence V. Castner, U. S. A., and Marie Louise Raby, and a son, John, also in the naval service.

Hevia Seizes Reins in Cuba; 3 Die in Riot

New President, Only 33, Is Graduate of Annapolis.

Grau Retires to Home; Island Without a Leader for Day.

Havana, Jan. 15 (AP). — Carlos Hevia, 33, a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, accepted the presidency of Cuba tonight after a chaotic day, during which nobody knew who was running the country.

While bullets of guardsmen whizzed outside the presidential palace and three supporters of the retiring executive, Ramon Grau San Martin, fell dead in the street, the former agriculture secretary decided to take over the office, after he had previously refused.

Between the time Grau San Martin submitted his resignation to a revolutionary junta and the cabinet and Hevia's decision, the utmost political confusion prevailed, with rumors of an army rift, fears of another revolution, rioting, and military preparations for trouble.

Changes Mind Frequently.

Hevia at first said he would accept the junta's offer that he head the government, but he later changed his mind, only to revert to the original decision. The status of Grau San Martin, the while, was conjectural.

Col. Fulgencio Batista, commandant of defense forces and former sergeant, had his troubles, too, at Camp Columbia, where Maj. Pablo Rodiquez, Grau's military aid, who went to arrest the army chief, was himself arrested and held for several hours by Batista's troops.

Immediately after Hevia's final decision, the cabinet resigned in a body and the work of rebuilding the government was inaugurated.

Hevia's only statement was, "I am the president."

Meanwhile, Dr. Antonio Guiteras retiring minister of war and the interior, who maneuvered Hevia into power, had his hands full lining up his Leftist followers, who fought their way to the top after other factions believed they had the situation sewed up for the Nationalist leader, Carlos Mendieta.

Hevia, despite his Leftist affiliations, has ties binding him to the Rightists. He has been closely connected with the sugar industry for 13 years. He is the youngest president Cuba has ever had, and is one of the few—if not the only—Cuban graduate of the American Naval Academy.

Three Certainties at Least.

Although the smoke of the political battles still beclouded the situation tonight, the following certainties emerged:

First, the Grau San Martin government, fourth since August, 1933, fell as suddenly as it was born last September 10.

Third, Col. Batista was manipulating to hold the power of the army and his chances appeared good.

Mendieta's position appeared hard of determine, inasmuch as he was the condidate for the Rightest element in last night's junta meeting and indorsed Hevia, only to withdraw the indorsement when Hevia

Bill Prolonging RFC Enacted In Both Houses

Measure Forwarded to President; Farm Credit Plan Up Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Moving swiftly in nonpartisan unison, House and Senate yesterday rushed to enactment within two hours a bill extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation another year and expanding its lending power $850,000,000.

The Senate passed the measure without a record vote, Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, interrupting debate on the St. Lawrence waterway treaty to outline the urgency of the bill.

The House passed the measure without amendment, under suspension of the rules, after two hours' debate. The vote was 186 to 1, Representative Louis T. McFadden (Republican), Pennsylvania, casting the solitary negative ballot. The bill was sent immediately to the President for signature.

Farm Credit Bill Approved.

Meantime, a second Administration measure guaranteeing the $2,000,000,000 principal of farm loan bonds, favorably reported by a House committee last week, was approved in amended form by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee by a vote of 9 to 3.

Before ordering a report on the bill, the committee deprived Farm Credit Administration Chairman W. I. Myers of the right to draft charter provisions of the proposed Federal Form Mortgage Corporation, cut the number of directors from 5 to 3, limited its life to February 1, 1936, and provided that any employe drawing more than $6,000 must be appointed by the President and approved by the Senate.

Farm Measure in House Today.

Money Embargo Vests Control of Foreign Credits in Treasury; Another Order Tightens Grip on New Gold.

In a move to strengthen Government control of foreign exchange and halt the flight of capital that accompanied dollar devaluation, President Roosevelt yesterday applied virtually an embargo on the withdrawal of all currency or credits for other than normal operations.

By two Executive orders he empowered the Secretary of the Treasury to extend the licensing system used to control bank transactions in foreign exchange to all persons seeking credits abroad. With another Executive order he authorized all mints and assay offices to receive gold under regulations of the Treasury.

The three orders, which had the effect of putting on firmer ground the Government's authority over foreign exchange, were accompanied by a brief White House statement explaining they were issued to give the Treasury greater latitude in regulation. Among the regulations is authority for the Secretary of the Treasury to open all books of those asking licenses.

Meanwhile, Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., in another order set Wednesday midnight, January 17, as the deadline for the delivery of all gold coin, gold bullion or gold certificates to the Treasurer of the United States in accordance with requirements established last December 28. Dras-

Cheap Dollar Will Not Help, Says Sprague

Reduction of the gold content of the dollar will not heal the Nation's ills, Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, of Harvard University, former monetary adviser to the Treasury Department, testified before the House Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee yesterday in tacit criticism of President Roosevelt's revaluation plan.

So many other factors enter into determination of economic conditions that establishment of a low metallic base for the Nation's currency is only incidental, declared Dr. Sprague, who resigned several weeks ago in protest against the Administration's monetary policy.

Dr. Sprague said a monetary adjustment such as the President proposed must be accompanied by "a clear understanding there will be no more monetary experiments."

Father Coughlin Testifies Today.

Father Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, in Detroit, and nationally known radio speaker, will testify before the committee today.

Dollar devaluation to 50 per cent is out of line with present price levels, Dr. Sprague said. He suggested, however, that such a low metallic base would have been of inestimable value in checking the wild upswing of 1928 which led to the market crash and the depression.

More important than devaluating the dollar at this time is a plan for tapering off emergency expenditures.

Britain Finds Solace in U.S. Money Plans

London View Holds Gold Has Been Placed on Sound Basis.

London, Jan. 15 (AP). — British financial opinion, as reflected in authoritative comment upon President Roosevelt's message to Congress today, expects the dollar eventually to be revalued at the full 60 per cent of its gold content, the permissible limit.

Unless this is done, it is argued, there still would be difficulties in establishing sterling-dollar stabilization.

The next phases of the Anglo-American monetary problem, financial quarters held, will be like fighting at close range—within 10 per cent limits — instead of over the whole financial arena with inflation as a possible dangerous weapon.

The President's program has put gold resources of the Nation on a sound basis, said one expressed view.

The British consider the dollar undervalued in relation to sterling and believe cooperative stabilization at anything less than 60 per cent level unlikely, unless the pound also is formerly devalued.

Was Eagerly Awaited.

London, the financial heart of the Empire, and Europe had awaited with intense interest the President's monetary message.

Then as newspapers spread the message over their first pages in special editions, the program was accepted as what had been anticipated, except that the recommendation for a minimum cut of 40 per cent of the gold content of the dollar was expected to be the maximum to which the dollar would be devalued.

On the foreign exchange market here, the reaction to President Roosevelt's message was in no wise spectacular. The dollar closed at

Gold Seizure Bill Conceded Swift Passage

Congress Sentiment Held Even More Favorable Than Last Session.

By Franklyn Waltman, jr.

With Democratic membership almost solidly supporting President Roosevelt's monetary policy, and Republicans demoralized by internal dissension, Congress today will start legislative machinery moving briskly toward enactment of the Administration's new gold bill.

This bill, drafted by Treasury experts to carry out the policy outlined by the President to Congress, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee. But a dispute immediately arose over whether that committee or the Coinage Committee should consider the measure. Determination of that question was before Speaker Henry T. Rainey last night.

Meanwhile an identical copy of the Steagall bill was sent to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, chairman of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. Instead of introducing the measure he decided to lay it before his committee at a meeting called for this afternoon when Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., may be asked to explain it.

Hearings Planned.

It is Senator Fletcher's plan to introduce the bill in the Senate after his committee has considered it and reached a tentative agreement on its provisions. The Republicans on the committee, however, propose to insist that public hearings be held on the bill at which all objectors may appear.

Declaring the bill represented "the most important piece of legislation to come before Congress during my 17 years of service," Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary called a conference of his party leaders for 10:30 a. m. today to decide what course the minority party should pursue.

Passage Conceded.

Privately, however, the Republicans admit that they are impotent to function as a unit against the measure. Outnumbered in both houses, the Republicans can not command all their strength. In the Senate at least 12 of the 35 nominal Republicans will support the bill, it was indicated.

Even though the eight Republicans on the Senate Banking and Currency Committee vote as a unit, they can not obstruct the progress of the bill. Of the 12 Democrats on the committee only two—Carter Glass of Virginia and Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma — are expected to be hostile to the bill. It is possible, however, one or more other

War Menaces Foochow Again

Opponents Near in Area as U. S. Sailors Land to Guard Citizens.

Foochow, China, Jan. 15 (AP). Shattered rebel forces and those of the National government were virtually face to face in the Foochow area tonight, after a day which brought repeated threats of an outbreak of hostilities.

Retreating rebels were moving southward while naval troops of the victorious National government remained at the mouth of the Min River, apparently desirous of allowing the revolting forces to depart.

Thirty United States sailors were on guard in the foreign quarter. They were landed today from the American gunboat Tulsa at the request of Gordon Burke, American vice consul. British and Japanese sailors and marines also are on duty in Foochow. The city was calm, but apprehensive.

The situation in Amoy, another center of the revolt, appeared grave. National forces held Kulangsu Island, while the rebels remained on the mainland.

19 Children Hurt As Bus Overturns

Bank Bandits Kill Detective, Take $41,000 in Four Raids

East Chicago, Ind., Jan. 15 (AP). Four robbers under a leader believed to be John Dillinger, escaped Michigan City, Ind., gang chief, robbed the First National Bank of East Chicago of $20,000 in cash today and killed Detective Patrick O'Malley in their escape.

O'Malley had responded to an alarm. The robbers met him as they left the building and opened fire with machine guns.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 15 (AP). Capt. Matt Leach of the State police, ordered eight officers to East Chicago to join the hunt for men who held up the First National Bank there today. Tremont is 16 miles from East Chicago.

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (AP).—Robbers armed with a submachine gun held up the Sixtieth and Ludlow streets branch of the Corn Exchange National Bank & Trust Co. in West Philadelphia today and escaped with about $20,000.

Police said the men broke into the building through a skylight, waited until the manager and six employes arrived, and then handcuffed them.

When the time lock released the main vault, the robbers took the cash and walked out the front door.

Hillside, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP).—Three armed men entered the Hillside Trust Co. today, forced three employes and several customers into a rear room and fled with about $500.

Burr Oak, Mich., Jan. 15 (AP).—A few hours after four men, armed with a submachine gun and pistols, had held up the First National Bank here today, two men were shot and captured by State police as they fled from a cottage at Middle Lake, 15 miles away.

The two gave their names as Joe McDonald, about 30, and John Smith, about 24, but both names, police said, are fictitious. Five hundred dollars was found on them. The robbery loot amounted to less than $1,000.

Boxing, Sunday Sports Sought In Virginia Bills

Clashes of Liberals and Reform Elements Over Measures Near.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 15.—Bills to legalize prize fighting and permit Sunday sports were the most important among a score introduced today in the General Assembly.

Observers cited liberal views of many new legislators in predicting moral issues would figure prominently in Senate and House debates. Far more measures alarming to reformers than customary have been offered already, with the session barely under way. Two bills to permit horse racing and pari-mutuel betting were advanced last week.

The boxing measure, sponsored by Delegate E. B. English, Richmond, would empower county supervisors and city and town councils to permit professional pugilistic programs. Unlimited purses could be offered, but bouts would be limited to 15 three-minute rounds. Promoters could charge admission.

Another English proposal would permit Sunday baseball, football and other sports between 2 and 7:30 p. m. Admission fees could be collected.

Home Gambling Favored.

Gambling for pleasure in private homes would be legalized in a bill offered by Delegate Vivian Page, Norfolk. He explained public gambling houses would remain illegal.

Senator T. Russell Cather, Winchester, advanced a measure intended to eliminate attorneys in State departments and center legal work in the office of the attorney general. Positions would be created for eight assistant attorneys general, to receive $3,000 to $5,000 a year. The annual salary of the attorney general would be increased from $6,000 to $7,000.

Several new House proposals would extend until March 15 the time limit for payment of 1933 taxes without penalty.

A resolution from northern Virginia automobile dealers opposed to a suggested general sales tax was submitted to the House. Democratic leaders earlier agreed to defeat any such legislation.

Third Degree Cited.

Further steps to safeguard the health of female employes would be required of merchants under another bill, introduced by English. Among other privileges, sales girls would be permitted to sit down when not busy.

Another Page measure would permit fines of $1,000 and jail sentences of not more than a year in cases involving use of third-degree methods by law-enforcement officers to obtain confessions.

English sponsored a bill to reduce resident fishing licenses from $3 to $2. A new nonresident fishing license costing $5 would be created.

Final plans were announced for inauguration Wednesday of Governor-elect George C. Peery. The program will include a parade and an address by the new governor.

Betting Plan Opposed.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.).—The Roanoke Ministers' Conference today passed resolutions asking the General Assembly to vote against pari-mutuel betting, which, the ministers said, would "lend the sanction of this State to a practice which has universally proved to be against the best interests of public morality."

Officers elected were the Rev. H. Edgar Knies, president; the Rev. C. G. Hesse, vice president, and the Rev. E. A. Lambert, secretary-treasurer. Dr. Nolan B. Harmon, jr., pastor, Greene Memorial Methodist Church, prepared the resolution against pari-mutuel betting.

Redistricting Bill Hit.

Richmond, Jan. 15 (AP).—Congressional redistricting, invariably an obstacle in the path of progress by the General Assembly, raised its head again today as the Holt bill, introduced on the first day of the session, came before the Senate privileges and elections committee.

The storm clouds gathered over the proposed bill quickly, and Senator Saxon W. Holt, patron of the bill and chairman of the privileges and elections committee, appointed a subcommittee to hear all protests and consider numerous amendments tomorrow.

Not only were the Republicans in the Senate drafting their own bills, but the Democrats, also, were finding fault with the measure.

Meanwhile, Delegate McMurran, of Portsmouth, served notice that he planned a bill calling for legislative redistricting for the House of Delegates.

Counties Named in Shift.

The Holt bill would take Cumberland County from the old Tenth and add it to the Fourth; would sever Wythe County from the Ninth and give it to the Fifth; would add to the Sixth Clifton Forge, Botetourt, Alleghany and Craig, all of part of the old Tenth; would give to the Eighth Albemarle, Greene and Madison Counties and the City of Charlottesville, out of the old Seventh; would add to the Seventh the cities of Staunton and Buena Vista and the counties of Amherst, Appomattox, Augusta, Bath, Buckingham, Fluvanna, Highland, Nelson and Rockbridge, all from the old Tenth, and leave unchanged the First, Second and Third Districts, and disturb the old Tenth only by the removal of Wythe.

McNamara Oldest Prisoner.

San Quentin Prison, Calif. (U.P.).—James B. McNamara, convicted dynamiter of the Los Angeles Times Building on October 1, 1910, is the oldest prisoner in this institution in point of time served. McNamara has served 23 years, having entered the prison December 10, 1911.

Killed Possum With Pistol.

Hecker, Ill. (U.P.).—Miss Marjorie Rausch, adjuged the most beautiful girl in Monroe County at a contest, also proved to be an expert pistol shot. When she saw a 'possum in the chicken yard of her home, 100 yards away, the girl opened fire with a pistol, killing the animal.

House Coinage Committee heard money arguments of Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, former Treasury adviser.

Bill to permit Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make direct loans to industry introduced by Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina.

Representative Chase (Republican), Minnesota, introduced bill to tax Government securities.

Straight Line Saves Mileage for Planes

San Francisco (U.P.).—The airplane's inherent advantage of unrestricted flight and disregard of crossings, traffic and other surface delays, is enhanced by its ability to fly a bee-line between points and thus save mileage.

United Airlines' New York-Chicago-Pacific Coast airway has been straightened out until it now is only 2,775 miles from the Statue of Liberty to the Golden Gate. This is 400 miles less than by rail, and 600 miles shorter than the most direct coast-to-coast automobile highway, making possible a 19½-hour coast-to-coast flight with three-mile-a-minute passenger planes.

Mendieta could not be reached after Hevia announced his decision.

The major disorder came when 1,000 die hards shouted, "Grau, don't quit!"

Fire Into Group.

Apparently tired of the day-long demonstrations, Batista's soldiers fired, first into the air and then into the groups, killing 3 and wounding at least 14.

Hevia, fatigued after 48 hours of wakefulness and still bewildered over the swiftness of events, retired to his rooms tonight, planning to sleep until tomorrow when he expected to take the formal oath of office, which his father-in-law, Chief Justice Juan Federico Edelmann, probably will administer.

In reply to questions, Hevia said: "I don't know what I am going to do now. Wait until tomorrow."

Meanwhile his wife, young, fair and slight, also fatigued dozed in an armchair. She spent last night in the presidential palace.

Grau moved out of the palace and went to his home.

While Hevia and his associates announced a plan to form a concentration cabinet, reliable opposition sources said they believed Hevia would not include in his government members of the major opposition groups.

Terrorism Threatened.

Students, who have been Grau's stanchest supporters, were stirred by the sudden change, and during the exodus from the palace freely discussed renewing a terroristic campaign.

During the day a split in army ranks was threatened and Mendieta sent a commission to inform Batista that Mendieta was withdrawing the support he previously tendered Hevia.

The commission informed Batista that "the United States will recognize any Cuban government supported by Mendieta, and that the United States' representative issued a statement saying his Government was following the same policy of observation regarding Hevia as it did President Grau."

A mob of 100 Negroes raided a store near the palace and wounded its proprietor. A crowd sacked the Choque, and the residence of Sanchez Lapatu, a physician.

"Representatives of the American Government continue to observe developments in Cuba, but I have no statement to make at this time," said Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's representative here.

Was Machado Enemy.

Senor Hevia commanded a revolutionary expedition against former President Machado which landed in Oriente Province in August, 1931, only to be surrounded by Machado's troops. He was then imprisoned and exiled to the United States, where he was a member of a New York revolutionary junta working against Machado.

Grau San Martin succeeded Carlos Manuel de Cespedes. His short term was marked by endless political bickerings and two major revolutionary attempts.

France "Regrets" U. S. Money Action

Expected Dollar Cut, But Want Stabilization.

Paris, Jan. 15 (AP).—President Roosevelt's announcement that the American dollar of the future would be valued at approximately 60 cents was received nonchalantly today by financial circles already reconciled to the idea.

Regret was expressed, however, that stabilization was to be delayed.

Officials of both the Government and the Bank of France said they expected the dollar to remain at the recent level and commercial interests explained that every point it is lowered, especially in relation to the franc, means harder competition for a France already troubled financially.

Ohio Retailers Find Yule Plea Far-Reaching

Canton, O. (U.P.).—The Canton Retail Merchants Board had its Christmas plea for a "far-reaching" holiday program satisfied this year.

During a public Santa Claus welcome, merchants released toy balloons, each bearing a card entitling the finder to a free gift at the particular store. One store manager, four days after the balloons were sent, received a letter, inclosing the firm's gift card, from Canonsburg, Pa. The gift was mailed.

The President's Message

Laws Asked to Give Government Explicit Right to Take Over Federal Reserve Gold for Monetary Reserve and Limit Dollar at 60 Cents for Revaluation.

The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress dealing with the monetary system follows:

To the Congress:

In conformity with the progress we are making in restoring a fairer price level and with our purpose of arriving eventually at a less variable purchasing power for the dollar, I ask the Congress for certain additional legislation to improve our financal and monetary system. By making clear that we are establishing permanent metallic reserves in the possession and ownership of the Federal Government, we can organize a currency system which will be both sound and adequate.

The issuance and control of the medium of exchange which we call "money" is a high prerogative of government. It has been such for many centuries. Because they were scarce, because they could readily be subdivided and transported, gold and silver have been used either for money or as a basis for forms of money which in themselves had only nominal intrinsic value.

In pure theory, of course, a government could issue mere tokens to serve as money—tokens which would be accepted at their face value if it were certain that the amount of these tokens were permanently limited and confined to the total amount necessary for the daily cash needs of the community. Because this assurance could not always or sufficiently be given, governments have found that reserves or bases of gold and silver behind their paper or token currency added stability to their financial systems.

Gold Coin Circulation Declared Unnecessary.

There is still much confusion of thought which prevents a world-wide agreement creating a uniform monetary policy. Many advocate gold as the sole basis of currency; others advocate silver; still others advocate both gold and silver whether as separate bases, or on a basis with a fixed ratio, or on a fused basis.

We hope that, despite present world confusion, events are leading to some future form of general agreement. The recent London agreement in regard to silver was a step, though only a step, in this direction.

At this time we can usefully take a further step, which we hope will contribute to an ultimate world-wide solution.

Certain lessons seem clear. For example, the free circulation of gold coins is unnecessary, leads to hoarding, and tends to a possible weakening of national financial structures in times of emergency. The practice of transferring gold from one individual to another or from the government to an individual within a nation is not only unnecessary but is in every way undesirable. The transfer of gold in bulk is essential only for the payment of international trade balances.

Requests Law to Give U. S. Title to Monetary Gold.

Therefore it is a prudent step to vest in the government of a nation the title to and possession of all monetary gold within its boundaries and to keep that gold in the form of bullion rather than in coin.

Because the safe-keeping of this monetary basis rests with the Government, we have already called in the gold which was in the possession of private individuals or corporations. There remains, however, a very large weight in gold bullion and coins which is still in the possession or control of the Federal Reserve banks.

Although under existing law there is authority, by executive act, to take title to the gold in the possession or control of the Reserve banks, this is a step of such importance that I prefer to ask the Congress by specific enactment to vest in the United States Government title to all supplies of American-owned monetary gold, with provision for the payment therefor in gold certificates. These gold certificates will be, as now, secured at all times dollar for dollar by gold in the Treasury—gold for each dollar of such weight and fineness as may be established from time to time.

Such legislation places the right, title and ownership to our gold reserves in the Government itself; it makes clear the Government's ownership of any added dollar value of the country's stock of gold which would result from any decrease of the gold content of the dollar which may be made in the public interest. It would also, of course, with equal justice, cast upon the Government the loss of such dollar value if the public interest in the future should require an increase in the amount of gold designated as a dollar.

60-Cent Dollar Act Asked, And Fund for Gold Trading.

The title to all gold being in the Government, the total stock will serve as a permanent and fixed metallic reserve which will change in amount only so far as necessary for the settlement of international balances or as may be required by a future agreement among the nations of the world for a redistribution of the world stock of monetary gold.

With the establishment of this permanent policy, placing all monetary gold in the ownership of the Government as a bullion base for its currency, the time has come for a more certain determination of the gold value of the American dollar. Because of world uncertainties, I do not believe it desirable in the public interest that an exact value be now fixed. The President is authorized by present legislation to fix the lower limit of permissible revaluation at 50 per cent. Careful study leads me to believe that any revaluation at more than 60 per cent of the present statutory value would not be in the public interest. I, therefore, recommend to the Congress that it fix the upper limit of permissible revaluation at 60 per cent.

That we may be further prepared to bring some greater degree of stability to foreign exchange rates in the interests of our people, there should be added to the present power of the Secretary of the Treasury to buy and sell gold at home and abroad, express power to deal in foreign exchange as such. As a part of this power, I suggest that, out of the profits of any devaluaiton, there should be set up a fund of $2,000,000,000 for such purchases and sales of gold, foreign exchange, and Government securities as the regulation of the currency, the maintenance of the credit of the Government and the general welfare of the United States may require.

Amendments to Facilitate Gold Transactions Sought.

Certain amendments of existing legislation relating to the purchase and sale of gold and to other monetary matters would add to the convenience of handling current problems in this field. The Secretary of the Treasury is prepared to submit information concerning such changes to the appropriate committees of the Congress.

The foregoing recommendations relate chiefly to gold. The other principal precious metal—silver—has also been used from time immemorial as a metallic base for currencies as well as for actual currency itself. It is used as such by probably half the population of the world. It constitutes a very important part of our own monetary structure. It is such a crucial factor in much of the world's international trade that it can not be neglected.

On December 21, 1933, I issued a proclamation providing for the coinage of our newly mined silver and for increasing our reserves of silver bullion, thereby putting us among the first nations to carry out the silver agreement entered into by 66 governments at the London Conference. This agreement is distinctly a step in the right direction and we are proceeding to perform our part of it.

All of the 66 nations agreed to refrain from melting or debasing their silver coins, to replace paper currency of small denominations with silver coins and to refrain from legislation that would depreciate the value of silver in the world markets. Those nations producing large quantities of silver agreed to take specified amounts from their domestic production and those holding and using large quantities agreed to restrict the amount they would sell during the four years covered by the agreement.

Silver Action Withheld Pending Developments.

If all these undertakings are carried out by the governments concerned, there will be a marked increase in the use and value of silver.

Governments can well, as they have in the past, employ silver as a basis for currency and I look for a greatly increased use. I am, however, withholding any recommendation to the Congress looking to further extension of the monetary use of silver because I believe that we should gain more knowledge of the results of the London agreement and of our other monetary measures.

Permit me once more to stress two principles. Our national currency must be maintained as a sound currency which, in so far as possible, will have a fairly constant standard of purchasing power and be adequate for the purposes of daily use and the establishment of credit.

The other principle is the inherent right of government to issue currency and to be the sole custodian and owner of the base or reserve of precious metals underlying that currency. With this goes the prerogative of government to determine from time to time the extent and nature of the metallic reserve. I am confident that the Nation will well realize the definite purpose of the government to maintain the credit of that government and, at the same time, to provide a sound medium of exchange which will serve the needs of our people.

Bill Prolonging RFC Rushed In Both Houses

Passes Representatives by 186 to 1, MacFadden Alone Objecting.

tension bill was obtained on the plea that the corporation's present lending powers expire the last of this week.

Representative Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, asked that the corporation be left free to make loans on up to $1,433,000,000 of frozen bank deposits, help industry through loans to mortgage companies, and aid in the financing of agricultural and industrial exports.

Republicans Protest.

There were scattered Republican protests against considering the bill under suspension of the rules prohibiting amendment. Representatives McFadden, Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York; Clyde Kelly and Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, and others, objected that the suspension amounted to a "gag."

The suspension forced out of the immediate legislative picture several amendments proposing direct loans to industry, individuals, and even educational institutions. Representative John J. McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, said he will introduce a bill for that purpose and ask Banking Committee hearings.

Managing the debate on the minority side, Representative Robert Luce, of Massachusetts, extolled the corporation's management under Chairman Jesse H. Jones, who heard the speech from the gallery.

Warns of "Orgy of Spending."

He called for unanimous approval of the measure, but sounded a note of admonition against mounting Federal expenditures.

"The Government should pause in this mad orgy of spending for fruitless work and return to the policy pursued under President Hoover of lending only on sound security, so the money will not be lost to taxpayers," he said.

Representative James W. Wadsworth (Republican), New York, asked that the corporation be empowered to make loans for repair of old buildings rather than building of new ones. He said the country already is "overbuilt" and the Public Works Administration is rendering the situation worse.

Charges of "indirect loans" by the corporation to Rupssia and China were made by Representative McFadden and Representative Fred Britten (Republican), Illinois. They demanded the corporation confine itself to domestic relief.

"Direct Loan" Plea Answered.

Steagall's answer to requests for "direct loans" to industry and small business was that the same result is now being accomplished through loans to mortgage companies, set up for the specific purpose of aiding business.

The bill to place a Government guarantee behind farm loan bonds, amended yesterday in the Senate Banking Committee, will be handled in the House today by Chairman Marvin Jones of the House Agriculture Committee.

Mother dear, You asked me what I'd like for my birthday. Well, I've decided—an extension telephone right in my own room! You know a fellow sixteen doesn't want everybody listening to what he says, and dad hates to turn off the radio while I'm telephoning. Now, if I had an extension I wouldn't bother anybody (and nobody'd bother me, either). Come on, Mom. It's awful cheap and it would be handy for you, too, during the day. Lovingly, Bob

Plans Aimed to Solve "Hardening" of Air at Highest Speeds.

Langley Field, Va., Jan. 16 (AP).—The design of an airplane to fly 544 miles an hour, close to the speed of sound and 121 miles over the world's record, but using existing engines, was made public here today.

The design deals with air which gets "hard" under the compression of great speed. Present-day planes are said to stand already at the threshold of this obstacle to super-speeds.

The new model comes from high aeronautical authority. The author is John Stack, engineer here for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. The plan is published in the first issue of the new Journal of the Aeronautical Sciences, organ of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

It is a midwing, cantilever monoplane, having a fuselage of circular cross-section and slightly tapered wings. A wing is 29.1 feet wide and its area 141.2 square feet. The fuselage diameter is 40 inches.

Engine and pilot would be entirely inclosed, with skin type radiators. Landing gear would be completely retractable, or the plane would be made to be catapulted like the early Wright machines, and its fuselage would be shaped for landing, preferably on water. Projecting surfaces which cause wind resistance would be done away with.

tic penalties were prescribed for failure to comply.

"Taken together," the White House statement said concerning the foreign exchange regulations, "the orders establish substantially the same regulation of foreign exchange as was established in the Executive order of March 10, 1933, but instead of applying only to banks, which were licensed under the Executive order of March 10, they apply to all persons dealing in foreign exchange.

"The Executive orders are further designed to permit of greater elasticity in the regulation of foreign exchange and related transactions. This continues in another form the authority given to the Secretary of the Treasury in the Executive orders of April 20 and August 28, 1933."

Three Exceptions Allowed.

Specifically excepted from the licensing provisions of the orders are "(a) normal commercial or business requirements, (b) reasonable traveling and other personal requirements, or (c) the fulfillment of legally enforceable obligations incurred prior to March 9, 1933." These are the same exceptions allowed in the March 10 order regulating banks.

The first of yesterday's orders detailed licensing procedure, prohibited the export of all currency—including silver—except by license or for customary needs, and continued the Federal Reserve Banks as watchdogs to report all unlicensed transfers of credit not permitted. The second amended the order of March 10 to conform with the new regulations.

"Every transaction in foreign exchange, transfer of credit between any banking institution within the United States and any banking institution outside of the United States," the new order reads, "* * * and the export or withdrawal from the United States of any currency or silver coin which is legal tender in the United States, by any person within the United States, is hereby prohibited, except under license * * *"

Treasury Holds Power.

Thus the Administration fortified itself against the flight of capital, which has been varyingly estimated as high as two billions since the first gold-buying operations presaged the devaluation of the dollar. Entire control of foreign credits thus was centered in the Treasury.

"License may be granted authorizing such transactions in foreign exchange, transfers of credit and exports of currency (other than gold certificates) or silver coin," it further ordered, "in such specific cases or classes of cases as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine in regulations prescribed hereunder and rulings made pursuant thereto."

Under the heading of regulations, the President empowers Secretary Morgenthau to require "any person engaged in any transaction, transfer, export or withdrawal referred to in this Executive order to furnish under oath complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters, or other paper, in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person either before or after such transaction, transfer, export or withdrawal is completed."

Heavy Penalty Prescribed.

The same penalties for violation—a fine up to $10,000 or 10 years in jail—are invoked by the order, which allows the Secretary of the Treasury to tighten or relax restrictions, to control both the inflow and outflow of credits. In this he will have power somewhat similar to those of other countries.

The order authorizing the acceptance of gold by the Federal mints places them under regulation of the Treasury with the restriction that the mint or assay office satisfy itself the gold has not been held in violation of former orders. Ownership of any gold coin, with minor exceptions, is now prohibited.

Mr. Morganthau's order setting a time limit on turning in gold supplemented one of December 28 which called into the Treasury all gold holdings. It stated that, after Wednesday, any person offering forbidden gold to any fiscal agent of the United States "shall be paid therefor only such part or none of the amount otherwise payable therefor as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe."

The balance, or whole, will be retained and applied to the penalty payable for failure to comply with the order. Violators of the Morgenthau order may be fined twice the amount of their holdings.

Murray Hurls Defi At Supreme Court

Threatens Troops if Pay Cut Is Overruled.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 15 (AP).—Gov. W. H. Murray warned the State Supreme Court today that if it overrides legislative salary reductions he may place the officers of the State auditor and treasurer under military control to prevent payment of "excessive salaries" to State officials.

The threat was contained in the governor's answer to a motion asking his dismissal as intervernor in the suit of two criminal court of appeals judges who are seeking full payment of their constitutional salaries, despite reduced legislative appropriations.

The court will determine tomorrow whether it will order the governor out of the suit.

Without City's Support Cause Is Lost, Says John Ihlder.

By Felix Bruner.

Creation of an informed public opinion is a necessary part of the program of alley and other slum elimination, in the opinion of John Ihlder, secretary of the Washington Committee on Housing and one of the country's authorities on housing. He looks upon slum elimination as a major part of the industrial recovery program.

"If we are to have a constructive housing program big enough to be of consequence in effecting our economic recovery," Mr. Ihlder said, "and if this program is to be of the greatest possible benefit to the community, there must be behind it an informed public opinion.

"An informed public opinion is possible only when wide publicity has been given to both existing conditions and practical remedies.

"In the opinion of many who have studied conditions, the reconstruction of our slums and blighted areas, accompanied by provision of low-cost housing, promises more for economic recovery than any other program now before the public.

Britain Emphasizes Problem.

"Even in Great Britain, which has been dealing with a long depression and methods of combatting it, the rebuilding of decadent and slum areas today is beleived the most effective method. Consequently, Great Britain is reemphasizing its construction housing program.

"Such a program, however, does take a little time to prepare because of the many factors to be taken into account, such as the scattered ownership of existing properties, the need of providing dwellings within the rental range of lower economic groups, and the necessity for planning carefully.

"Projects of the CWA, which enables us to meet immediate needs promptly, and of Public Works, which, while requiring careful planning, can be undertaken fairly promptly, may be regarded as preparatory to the bigger job of slum and blighted area reconstruction. But it is the last that has enough content to keep us going until the wheels of industry begin to function again.

High Prices Prove Obstacle.

"This shows why it is necessary to create an informed public opinion that will not demand the impossible, that is, an immediate clearing away of all slum areas, and that will not allow the exploitation of the Government by demanding unreasonable prices for properties that have become community liabilities. Slum reconstruction, when begun with demonstration areas secured at reasonable prices, may be continued in other areas as the first ones prove their value.

"An informed public opinion that will back a sound program can be created only by widespread publicity. And this widespread publicity is helpful so long as it does not indicate individual properties that may be selected for development and so give the owners an opportunity to raise their prices."

In this series of articles the writer has carefully avoided at all times discussion of conditions in any specific locality. The purpose has been exactly that expressed by Ihlder, to create public opinion and public understanding of the general problem in Washington.

These articles have brought a number of interesting letters from readers.

Hovels Near the Capitol.

One reader points out that, while alley conditions are bad, there are houses not in the alleys that either should be removed or renovated. This letter points out there are such houses in the vicinity of the new Supreme Court Building and the Shakespearean Library.

"May we not hope that you or the District Committee will take some action in this matter in the interest of better Washington?" the letter concludes.

That there are housing conditions in Washington outside the alleys as bad as the conditions in some alleys is not disputed. That there should be some official action concerning these houses is obvious. But the alleys present a problem that goes beyond housing conditions. They present a social problem in relation to crime and disease that can not be approximated on the streets.

A physician who says his practice takes him into alley dwellings, despairs of improving the living standards of alley dwellers.

"Can't Convert Alley Dwellers."

"For many years," he writes, "I have been what is colloquially termed one of 'the physicians to the poor' and because of that work I have been seeing the alley dweller and his like outside the alleys for many years and at very close quarters, and because of this observation, I have reached the conclusion that with some few exceptions, the type of inhabitants that you have found in the alley is there largely as a matter of choice. I have concluded that even though you remove him to the most palatial dwelling in the city, he will, unless very closely supervised, in a short time convert that structure into the same type of structure you have found in the alley.

"I am heartily in sympathy with every effort to wipe out the slum districts and to substitute something better, but as I have publicly stated on more than one occasion, the mere moving of the present type of alley dwellers to more sanitary and better dwellings will not accomplish that result until you have made fundamental changes in the character and viewpoint of these people.

Alley Elimination Held Near as Agitation Grows Here.

The way that this is to be accomplished is beyond me."

It is beyond me, too, doctor.

This is a problem that always arises in connection with any housing program. Housing and social workers, however, say the percentage of people incapable of maintaining themselves in an improved status is not as high as the writer of the letter believes.

Sees Doom of Alleys.

But even if everything he says is true, alley elimination will remove the hidden slums and will bring these people out in the open where the kind of supervision the doctor suggests becomes more nearly possible than in the alleys as they now exist in Washington.

There is every indication the alleys will not exist much longer. After years of agitation, these hidden menaces are definitely on their way out. A start has been made with the assurance that public works funds will be made available for at least two model housing projects that will put Washington in the ranks of the leading cities in this respect.

The Senate has passed the alley elimination bill and the District Committee of the House is ready to take it up. Passage of this bill will complete the work started by the Public Works Projects.

There is every indication the informed public opinion, of which Ihlder speaks, now exists and that it will insist on the slum clearance program being carried to a successful conclusion.

District Liquor Draft Pending

Details of Regulations to Await Senate Vote on System.

Actual drafting of the regulations which will govern the sale of liquor in the District will await Senate action today on the bill, Corporation Counsel William W. Bride said last night.

Because of the uncertainty as to Senate action, District officials decided to delay drawing up the rules until they are certain that the private license system will be approved by Congress.

If their measure is enacted, the Commissioners must decide whether liquor shall be sold on Sundays, the distance of sellers from schools and churches, and possibly the number of licensees.

RFC in Detroit "Went Limit," Senators Told

Leading Industrialists Did Nothing to Avert Crash, Examiner Says.

Leading Detroit industrialists refused to lend assistance to the hard-pressed Detroit Guardian Bank group just before the Michigan State bank holiday was called in February, 1933, the Senate Banking Subcommittee learned yesterday.

John K. McKee, Reconstruction Finance Corporation bank examiner, explained details of the three-day conference which led finally to the holiday. He said the R. F. C. had "gone the limit" in its offer of a loan of $37,720,000 and could not, within the law, lend the additional $13,880,000 necessary to meet the deposit liabilities of the Guardian Union Trust, one of the Guardian units.

He said he had understood Henry Ford would be willing to subordinate his deposit of $7,500,000 in the Guardian National Bank of Commerce, thereby leaving a deficit of $6,380,000.

Walter Chrysler, of the Chrysler Motor Co., and Alfred P. Sloan, of General Motors Corporation, were among business men who had no deposits with the Guardian group who were called in to the conferences in Detroit.

"I wanted to see these others do something," said MeKee. "The situation was serious. We had done all we could. They never gave me any reason why they were unwilling to help with this deficit."

The hearing will be continued today with further testimony by various Guardian group officials.

Brookhart Speaks Tomorrow.

Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, will deliver a lecture on Russia at 8 p. m. tomorrow to the Men's Union of Riverdale Presbyterian Church in the church auditorium. After his speech he will answer questions about the Soviet republics.

Van Der Lubbe Buried.

President's Plan for Dollar Revaluation Is Summarized

President Roosevelt's monetary recommendations in brief:

1—Declared the time has come for revaluation of the dollar and asked Congress to require that the present gold value of the dollar be reduced to at least 60 per cent. Present law permits devaluation in any amount down to 50 per cent.

2—Requested legislation to give the Government permanent possession of all of the country's $4,000,000,000 in monetary gold, including the $3,566,290,000 held by Federal Reserve banks.

3—Urged that Government's profits on this gold as a result of devaluation be used to set up a $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to regulate the dollar's value in foreign exchange.

4—Recommended that circulation of gold coin be permanently forbidden; all gold to be held by the Government in form of bullion as used only to settle international balances.

5—Viewed present policy of permitting coinage of new silver as a "step in the right direcommendations regarding silver tion," but withheld further recpending study of international silver action.

Tax Revision Plan Waited in Virginia

Legislators Are Expected to Demand Change.

Richmond, Jan. 15 (Spl.).—Removal of taxation inequalities allegedly favoring corporations and wealthy individuals may be demanded by a joint legislative committee headed by Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax.

The committee has been in session at intervals for several days. Members declined to comment tonight, but they were believed to contemplate important changes in State financial policy.

One plan known to be under consideration would call for reenactment of levies repealed several years ago in an effort to draw new corporations into Virginia. Such a program would result in taxes on stock in foreign corporations.

Dr. Kendig was prominent in medical and political activities in Virginia. Born in Spotsylvania County, he was trained at the Medical College of Virginia where he received his degree in 1905. He had practiced medicine at Victoria for 27 years and with his brother established a hospital there in 1921.

Civic Leaders To Head Bank

C. G. Price, Harrisonburg, Elected to Succeed C. G. Harnsbarger.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.).—C. Grattan Price, insurance man and civic leader, today was elected president of the Rockingham National Bank to succeed C. G. Harnsbarger, who has served since 1914. W. M. Menefee, city councilman, was named vice president to succeed Judge T. N. Haas, who has served since 1922.

Both Mr. Harnsbarger and Judge Haas asked to be relieved, saying they had served long enough.

Mr. Price becomes the fourth president of the bank, which was organized in 1900 and today claims resources of more than $1,500,000. He is a former president of the chamber of commerce, the Rotary Club and other local organizations.

He is the second new bank president to be elected here in six months. County Clerk J. Robert Switzer was named head of the First National Bank last October when W. L. Dechert resigned because of ill health. The 88-year-old James E Reherd remains president of the National Bank of Harrisonburg, being reelected last week.

County Groups To Hear Pleas Of Consumers

Complaint Council Set-up Told to First Lady by Mrs. Rumsey.

Mrs. Mary H. Rumsey, chairman of the consumers advisory board of NRA, announced yesterday that "consumer complaint machinery" has been completed by organization of Consumer County Councils.

Explaining membership of local councils at Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's press conference, to which the First Lady had invited her, Mrs. Rumsey said each group will be composed of seven members and will be appointed by the State director of NRA.

Consumers' complaints reaching the local board will be referred to the Fair Price Committee, to be set up at NRA headquarters under the direction of Dexter M. Keezer, member of the advisory board.

If complaints are not settled either locally or by Keezer's committee, the natural progress will be to the Department of Justice, although, said Mrs. Rumsey, a well-organized local machinery will obviate such drastic action in most cases.

"The problem of the entire consumers' group is to educate people not to pay below a fair price," contributed Mrs. Roosevelt to the discussion.

Questioned about the difficulty of such an educational campaign, the First Lady observed:

"Well, you can do remarkable things with human nature, you know."

Mrs. Rumsey listed the following as groups from which the seven members of local councils will be chosen:

1. Women's organizations actively interested in consumer problems.
2. County agents.
3. Home demonstration agents, or a trained home economist, chosen by the State university.
4. Dirt farmers.

Housewives on list.

5. Housewives of moderate or less than moderate means.
6. Manual workers.
7. Representatives from some consumers' organization, such as the cooperative associations, or trade unions.

Dr. Paul H. Douglas, member of the advisory board, has already chosen 15,000 to serve on the local councils, from a selected list supplied him by local agencies. He has 6,000 more to choose before the councils for the 3,000 counties of the Nation are filled.

Britain Sees Hope In U. S. Dollar Plan

$5.14½ to the pound, improving at the finish. Speculative selling immediately after the tenor of the recommendations was made known had caused the currency to ease to $5.15½ to the pound.

A net depreciation of 4⅞ cents to the pound in comparison to Saturday's close at $5.09⅝ was registered. Anticipatory selling had weakened the rate in the morning to around $5.12 to the pound. The dollar opened at $5.10½ to the pound.

Stamp Sees Possibilities.

Sir Josiah Stamp, the noted economist, in commenting on President Roosevelt's 60 per cent revaluation figure, said:

"It is apparently merely a limit. If it is a definite objective, it is good insofar as we then know where we stand.

"The question of its effect on us and on trade will depend entirely on how the exchanges treat the dollar in relation to the change in internal prices.

"For example, if the dollar depreciation is much greater than the rise in prices, then we will have severe competition. If it is the same as the rise in prices, then it may have no effect on us except as it may help the American situation and indirectly help us."

"By giving the world, and actually putting into operation in the United States," his statement said, "A New Deal for the operation of industry, I believe the United States is entering a period that future history will term the greatest reconstruction period."

Gold Seizure Bill Conceded Swift Passage

Congress Sentiment Held Even More Favorable Than Last Session.

Democrats may support the demand for public hearings.

But in any event the bill is expected—even by the Republicans—to be passed by a majority similar to that given the Thomas inflation amendment last spring. On that occasion 50 Democrats and 13 Republicans in the Senate voted in the affirmative while only three Democrats and 18 Republicans voted "no." In the House 273 Democrats and 30 Republicans supported the amendment which was opposed by only seven Democrats and 79 Republicans. The Farmer-Labor members in both bodies supported the amendment.

The comments made yesterday by leaders in House and Senate indicated that there has been no change in Congressional sentiment since last spring—if anything the hostility was less sharp.

Steal, Says Senator Glass.

The most scorching remark came from Senator Glass, whose speech on sound money in the 1932 campaign was applauded by President Roosevelt and to whom was offered the Treasury portfolio last February. The fiery Virginian directed his remark to the proposal to seize the Federal Reserve gold holdings as a preliminary step to revaluation of the gold dollar.

"Humanitarians can find some excuse for a man who steals when he has to," Senator Glass asserted, "but what excuse is there for stealing when there is no need for it?"

His thought was echoed by Senator Daniel Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, who uttered the one word: "Robbery!"

Representative Robert Luce, ranking Republican on the House Banking and Currency Committee, contended seizure of the Federal Reserve gold, which he interpreted, as "taking away two-fifths, possibly one-half, of their property, without just compensation" would be "a blot on the honor of the country."

Mr. Luce argued that such action would be a violation of the bill of rights, since the Government at present is paying Frenchmen and Englishmen $34.06 an ounce for gold but proposes to pay "citizens of the United States $20.67 an ounce." He predicted the Supreme Court would be called on to determine whether that was "just compensation" and warned that the recent Minnesota decision has no relevancy.

Silver Bloc Passive.

These were the only sharp comments on the President's proposal. The leaders of the silver bloc, while not denunciatory, expressed no enthusiasm for the President's course. Apparently they believed that his gold revaluation policy left little room for further steps with silver.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, silver bloc leader in the upper body, contended that "if the President would remonetize silver it would have much more effect in raising the world commodity price than cutting the gold content of the dollar."

"The devaluation and inflationary schemes employed by France, Italy, Germany and Austria did not affect world prices," he added. "I intend to keep on pushing my silver remonetization bill."

Speaker Rainey, an ardent advocate of silver remonetization, did not refer to the failure of the President to recommend further use of silver, but neither did he heap any applause on Mr. Roosevelt's latest program. It was significant he contented himself with pointing out what the program meant, when most other Democrats were lustily applauding.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, also a silver advocate, however, took cheer from that part of the President's message wherein he said that "governments can well, as they have in the past, employ silver as a basis for currency and I look for a greatly increased use."

Other Democrats Cheer.

The Nevadan, hailing the Presidential message as "clear and frank," contended that it "forever removes the insinuations that Mr. Roosevelt assumes to be a dictator," since by asking specific sanction from Congress for his program when he already possessed all necessary power demonstrated "his confidence in the cause, in Congress and in the American people."

Other Democrats devoted their statements to applauding the President, insisting there was nothing unconstitutional or improper by commandeering gold and declaring the bill to carry out the program would be enacted promptly.

Representative Bertram Snell, House Republican leader, however, asserted that while "the Democrats are applauding it, they don't know what it is." He added: "Neither do we. I can not comment on it now."

Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who led the fight against the Thomas amendment last spring, was in Pittsburgh. Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma—father of the inflation amendment, however, expressed "100 per cent" approval of the new measure, predicting a boom in business.

Egg-Laying Contest Grows.

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—The Pennsylvania egg-laying contest here, while only 2 years old, has grown into the largest standard competition of its kind in the United States, according to State officials. The Pennsylvania contest has 970 entries.

Bond Issues Decreased.

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—A large decrease in bonds issued by various municipal subdivisions of Pennsylvania occurred last year. The bonds approved in 1933 totaled $17,886,600. For the same period in 1932, bonds approved totaled $27,505,215.

60-Cent Dollar Plan Given To Congress by President

drastic new moves was inflationary, sending stocks,, commodities and even Government bonds surging upward, while the dollar fell on the exchanges. Wall street had a 4,000,000-share day, biggest since the feverish, short-lived summer boom; wheat and cotton gained.

Congress, somewhat awed and startled, still obedient to the will of the White House, applauded, or seemed bewildered, or, as in the case of Senators Glass and Hastings, gave way to solemn head-shaking.

Beginning with the President's special message, which he had read confidentially the night before to 40 members of Congress, the day brought forth a rapid succession of developments, of which these were outstanding:

1. Congress heard clerks read the special message asking specific approval of the President's asserted existing power to "vest in the United States Government title to all supplies of American-owned monetary gold," to revalue it from time to time and to use $2,000,000,000 of the profit as a stabilization fund to buy and sell gold, foreign exchange and Government securities.

Unprecedented Power Asked.

2. Senator Fletcher and Representative Steagall, respective Senate and House chairmen of the Banking and Currency Committees, presented the Treasury draft of the desired legislation, which grants the Treasury unprecedented dominion for the future over all monetary stocks, gives its drastic controls over all foreign exchange operations and, in effect, vests it with the functions, save for currency issue, and with the assets of a central bank. Congress appeared ready to grant these new powers, after a flare-up from the minority of dissenters.

3. Foreshadowing the 60-cent dollar, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced that, beginning today, the price for newly mined domestic gold will be $34.45, less one-fourth of 1 per cent for handling charges, this being the equivalent of the 60-cent dollar. It was the first change in the artificial price of $34.06 since December 18. A 60-cent gold dollar would contain 13.93 grains of gold, compared with 23.22 grains in the old dollar; a 50-cent dollar would contain 11.61 grains. Morgenthau also announced that, beginning today, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, instead of the RFC, will be the Government's agent in buying domestic gold and that the $34.45 price will hold "until further notice."

Gold Purchases Revealed.

4—Chairman Jones announced that the RFC has bought $97,000,000 of foreign gold, $40,000,000 of it since the first of the year; that the RFC has expanded its purchase fund to $150,000,000, of which all but $25,000,000 has been used; that it has taken 681,374 ounces of domestic gold for $22,898,735; that the foreign purchases are hald earmarked in London and Paris, and, finally, that revaluation will net the RFC a profit, too, on its gold.

5—The President issued three executive orders and Secretary Morgenthau issued one; two of the President's tightened Treasury control over foreign exchange operations and over inflow and outflow of private capital; the third involved a technical change in authorization to mints and assay office to receive gold on consignment; Mr. Morgenthau ordered midnight of January 17 fixed as the end of the time within which gold coin, buildion or certificates may be surrendered to the Treasurer of the United States, in compliance with his December 28 orders.

League Flirts With Germany

Invites Hitler to Join Unit in Charge of Saar Plebiscite.

Geneva, Jan. 15 (AP).—Chancellor Hitler and Germany were given the opportunity today—if they want it—to edge their way back into Geneva.

The rich Saar Basin, former German territory, is the bait.

The inrhabitants of the district are to vote next year on whether they shall be French or German, and the League of Nations will supervise the plebiscite.

Rene Massigli, French delegate to the Seventy-eighth session of the league council, which went into action today, told the council that France, "in the spirit of loyalty and fair play," desired that Germany be allowed to send a Saar plebiscite representative to the council.

The invitation was telegraphed at once to Berlin, following a discussion of Germany's position as a result of her withdrawal from the league last October.

Meanwhile, meetings on the disarmament situation, previously expected to begin simultaneously with the council session, apparently will be postponed until the Franco-Germany conversations show progress.

Explanation

Treasury Tells What Gold Law Would Affect.

The monetary gold, all of which President Roosevelt believes should be owned by the Nation, was explained last night by Treasury officials to mean all the precious metal used as currency, or held for reserve against currency issues, the Associated Press said.

This includes newly mined gold which is being purchased by the Treasury, but does not include the metal utilized for jewelry or for other such commercial purposes.

Officials said, however, that if gold now used for commercial purposes other than currency or as a currency base, were melted into bullion and turned into the Treasury it also would become monetary gold.

Ballou Lauds Scholarships Plan of Post

Will Focus Attention on Situation's Gravity, Says Educator.

Praise of the contribution offered by The Washington Post Scholarship Competition toward solution of grave problems, forced upon local educational leaders by the depression, was tendered to The Post today by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of local public schools, as well as by George J. Jones and William M. Brewer, directors of the history and civics studies for Washington's thousands of high school students.

The competition, which opened Sunday for public, private and parochial secondary school students in Washington, Alexandria and 20 Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia counties, calls for the writing of preliminary essays on vital governmental problems, and subsequent finals on local university campuses, to determine winners of five, 4-year tuition scholarships offered by American and Georgetown Universities, the Catholic University of America and Howard University.

"I desire to express appreciation and commendation to The Washington Post," stated Dr. Ballou, "for making available these scholarships to boys and girls graduating from our high schools, who might otherwise be unable to secure the advantages of a higher education in our local colleges and universities.

Focuses Attention.

"I am particularly appreciative of this because I am convinced that the adult public generally has been so absorbed with the financial depression as it affects them, that they have not given the attention which they will, I believe, necessarily have to give to the way in which the depression is affecting our young people.

"Graduates of our high schools are unable to find employment as they have been heretofore, and many others are unable to go to college because their parents lack the financial resources necessary to send them. These young people are, therefore, largely without anything to occupy their minds and interests, and undoubtedly in the minds of all educational people, present one of the most important and grave social conditions that exist today.

"Anything that makes it possible to maintain the morale of these young people by providing them with further educational opportunities is to be highly commended. I am glad that provision is being made by The Washington Post to help some of these worthy graduates of our Washington High Schools."

Mr. Jones, who directs the study of civics and history at Central, Eastern, McKinley, Roosevelt and Western High Schools, stated that the competition should do much to further the interest of students, and particularly those under his jurisdiction, in governmental and related subjects.

Valuable to Seniors.

"Offered at this critical period," said Jones, "when senior high school students are most seriously concerned in both National and international affairs, this project will be of value to every senior class student of civics, economics and international problems.

"This contest should get under way immediately after classes in these subjects are organized, at the beginning of the new semester, in February. The subjects for essays are planned so as to come within the courses of study, so that each student in senior high school civics, economics and international problems should write on one topic and receive credit for this work as a definite and required part of the course.

"Seniors in American history classes during the next semester, who are not enrolled in civics, economics or international problems, are also offered an opportunity to write on any one of four well-chosen topics. Participation in the contest by American history students should be optional.

"Teachers of the social sciences in Washington, as a major objective, attempt to bring about in their teaching thoughtful, intelligent discussion of social, economic and political problems—past and present. Knowing the past does much to give understanding of the present, and the past is better understood through the light of the present."

Aid to Life Work.

William J. Brewer, who directs the study of history and social sciences at Armstrong, Cardoza and Dunbar High Schools, also feels that the competition is well adapted to the regular curricula of his classes during the coming term.

"This project will serve admirably," stated Brewer, "to increase the interest of this large group of students in the relation of Governmental machinery, not only to the social sciences, but also to the professions and industries which they may later follow. The contacts which Governmental bureaus are at this time making with industries and professions in the recovery program are being studied and watched with interest by the teachers and students in my classes that cover these problems."

Keogh Resigns As Assistant To Prosecutor

Leaves Federal Branch of Police Court for Private Practice.

Michael F. Keogh, for five years assistant United States attorney in charge of the Federal branch of Police Court, yesterday submitted his resignation to United States Attorney Leo A. Rover. He will retire from office February 28.

Starting his career in the United States attorney's office as a clerk, Keogh worked his way through the Georgetown Law School. He was appointed assistant to the United States attorney shortly after he was graduated in 1928.

As a prosecutor, Keogh gained fame through his prosecution of proprietors of three so-called "humor" magazines. The publications were classed as lewd and vulgar and were withdrawn from sale here after vendors had been tried and found guilty.

Literally thousands of cases have gone through his hands in the last five years. All Police Court cases, with the exception of liquor proceedings, went to his office for preliminary investigation.

Keogh, who is unmarried, lives at 2001 Sixteenth street northwest. He plans to enter private practice of law here, though his home is in Scranton, Pa. He was appointed to his present post by Justice Peyton Gordon, who formerly was United States attorney.

Sprague Holds Cheaper Dollar Will Not Help

Hits Roosevelt Plan at House Committee Hearing.

in purchasing power will be that accruing to the Government through a $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 windfall," the witness said, adding the warning that American export trade may be hurt if the devaluation causes other governments to take "protective measures."

Words Puzzle Hearers.

Restoration of the "equilibrium rate" is the important thing, Dr. Sprague explained, while committee members, with furrowed brows, sought to follow him through a maze of involved financial advice.

"Then you don't agree with Winston Churchill that gold is the yardstick?" asked Representative William Feisinger (Democrat), Ohio.

"O, my no! I very seldom agree with Winston Churchill on anything," replied the witness, who was economic adviser to the Bank of England before coming here to advise the Treasury Department on monetary affairs.

Dr. Sprague said that in England, when Great Britain went off the gold standard, many persons unwisely demanded its return, without considering the equilibrium rate or means of avoiding extreme fluctuation in the value of the pound sterling.

"It seemed advisable first to determine what the equilibrium rate might be," he said.

Talks of French Method.

When France undervalued the franc, it was to maintain the price level that then obtained, "quite a different thing," the witness said, from President Roosevelt's attempt to bring about an increase in prices.

Only once did the witness touch on the question of silver. That was when, in answer to a question, he said he believed "the direct action of the use of silver in effecting trade recovery in the next few months could only be comparatively slight." He said he thought some silver advisable in an "adequate metallic base."

Dr. Sprague said he did not think "an increased amount of gold in the central banks would have made any appreciable difference in commodity prices."

Asked if he did not favor a metallic base for National currency, however, the witness replied that he did, adding that "a metallic base on the whole exerts a restraining influence."

It would have been better for the United States if our metallic base had been much less in 1928, Dr. Sprague said. As it was, the Government was unable to exert a sufficiently restraining influence on prices and credit.

Could Have Averted Crash.

"If, at that time, the metallic base of the currency of the United States had been 50 per cent or less, we could have taken the restraining step so badly needed," he continued.

"The metallic base is desirable, because no very considerable departure from the equlibrium base can be taken without the restraining influence being felt."

But the monetary factor is only one of many in determining economic conditions, Dr. Sprague warned.

"When the supply far exteeds the demand, I fail to see how we can gain by changing our monetary system and merely increasing the supply," he said.

"Will it be more difficult to borrow money if we change our monetary system?" a committee member asked.

"It will," said Dr. Sprague.

Mae West in Court; Fears "Gangsters"

Lawyer Explains "Menace" in Robbery Trial.

Los Angeles, Jan. 15 (AP).—Intimations that two mysterious Chicago gangland characters were menacing the life of Mae West were injected today into the trial of Edward Friedman on charges of robbing the blonde motion picture star of $12,000 in jewels and $34,000 cash two years ago.

When Miss West appeared in superior court, she was taken almost immediately to the private office of Chief Deputy District Attorney Robert P. Stewart.

High CWA Pay Causes Strike

Quarry Workers in Valley Vainly Demand Listing for Relief Work.

New Market, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.).—CWA grumbling here grew today when the 15 employes of the Madden stone quarries went on strike just prior to the delivery of 578 tons of crushed stone to the town for CWA street paving projects.

The men struck because of alleged back pay due them from the stone quarry interests and in protest of the higher wages being paid here to CWA workers.

Many of the strikers came to the local employment office and demanded to be registered for CWA jobs. Officials, however, said no employe formerly connected with the quarry would be placed on the CWA rolls.

The difficulties were temporarily arbitrated when it was decided that R. W. Moore & Co., Staunton contractors, would become associated with the local quarry and guarantee pay to the employes.

Virginia Labor Leader Fights Sales Tax as Burden on Poor

Richmond, Jan. 15 (AP).—R. T. Bowden, former president of the Virginia Federation of Labor, today issued a statement objecting strongly to a general sales tax on the ground that wage earners and farmers would actually carry the burden of this sort of tax in the long run.

"If the same tax is passed on to the consumer," he said, "which will most surely happen, it will lower the standard of living of the small wage earner. Any taxation which lowers the standard of living of good citizens is unsound in principle and will be inhuman in practice and must eventually result in decay in the government which adopts any such tax."

This, he said, is the formally expressed view of the State federation. As for a tax on luxuries and amusements, Mr. Bowden was dubious, although the Virginia labor organization has taken no definite stand.

Luxury taxes are objectionable for many reasons, he contended, adding:

"They are certainly what one may term nuisance taxes. When amusements are taxed it often causes persons of small means to forego this form of recreation. This is bad for two reasons—it causes a loss of business to owners of the amusements and also a loss of opportunity for recreation to those who can not afford to pay the tax."

Thus far no member of the present General Assembly has come forward with a sales tax bill, although it has been reported one would be presented. Gov. Pollard suggested the sales tax as one of a number of possible sources of additional revenue, but did not specifically recommend it. Gov.-elect Peery is understood to be against the sales tax.

"The most striking and potent reason yet given for a sales tax," Mr. Bowden said, "is that it is easy to collect."

Post Writer Tells Of Hill Craftsmen

Mountaineers, many of whom have never been 10 miles from their birthplace, and some of whom have not seen a train, are producing outstanding beautiful reproductions of early American furniture.

These technically untutored master craftsmen also are handwrought iron specialists. Having the art in their blood from English and Dutch ancestors, they are turning out rare pieces in the wooded fastness of nearby Virginia.

Marion Butler's story about these little-known specialists in an exacting trade, which will appear in the Woman's Section of tomorrow's Post, will attract every one interested in fine furniture. It will be illustrated with exclusive pictures.

Bill Asks Bonds Of $40,000,000 In West Virginia

3% Per Cent Sales Tax Also Proposed in Crisis Over Finances.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.).—Acting on a resolution introduced by Delegate G. A. Davis (Democrat), Cabell, the West Virginia House of Delegates today prohibited the introduction of any new city charter measures without the consent of a majority of the members. Davis originally sought a two-thirds vote requirement.

The resolution followed acceptance by the House of Gov. Kump's veto of the Charleston charter bill and the refusal of the delegates to pass it over the veto, as requested by Delegate J. Shirley Ross (Democrat), Kanawha, who said the vote was what he wanted to pave the way for the introduction of a new charter bill.

Delegate L. E. Lantz (Democrat), Wetzel, submitted a proposed amendment to the constitution, authorizing the State to assume bonded road debts of counties and districts and empowering the Legislature to issue $40,000,000 in bonds for that purpose.

A bill was introduced by Delegate Wilbert H. Norton, (Democrat), Cabell, for a three per cent consumer's sales tax for school support, which he said would yield $15,000,000 annually. A companion bill would repeal the existing retail sales tax of three-fourths of one per cent.

Senator George C. Beneke, (Republican), Ohio, has introduced a bill proposing an association of fire and life insurance companies, building and loan and savings and loan associations, title guaranty companies, mutual savings companies and similar organizations under the name of the Savings and Loan Corporation of West Virginia. Participating companies would be entitled to obtain loans from the association, the capital of which would be subscribed by them.

The Senate has approved a bill authorizing the Lewis County court to borrow Federal funds for erection of a new county jail and a heating plant.

Musician's Relief Helped by Iturbi

Spanish Pianist Appears in New York Benefit.

Jose Iturbi, the Spanish pianist, whom Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey will present in Constitution Hall on the afternoon of January 21 as the fourth attraction in her Sunday afternoon recital series, collaborated with Lawrence Tibbett and Jascha Heifetz in giving a joint recital last Friday night in New York for the benefit of destitute musicians. The recital, given in the music room of Mr. Heifetz' penthouse apartment, yielded more than $10,000 for the fund.

At this recital Senor Iturbi played two works which are on his program for next Sunday—the B flat minor Scherzo of Chopin and "Fete-Dieu a Seville," by Isaac Albeniz. The concluding number was Rakhmaninov's "In the Silence of the Night," sung by Lawrence Tibbett, with Iturbi accompanying and Heifetz playing a violin obbligato.

Iturbi's Washington program will open with Beethoven's "Andante Favori," followed by Schumann's G minor sonata. A Chopin group will contain the Scherzo mentioned, the "Fantaisie-Impromptu" and "Valse Brillante." A feature of the recital will be some "Tableaux," by Ernest Brooks, a young American composer, hailing from Tulsa, Okla. These are entitled "Punch and Judy," "The Drear Wind Is A-Spinping," "Two Inventions" and "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater."

How to Keep Well

Quinsy.

Quinsy is a boil located in an area where there are many possibilities of harm. Boils are never sources of ease and joy. On the contrary, they are always painful. But in certain locations they are especially so. There is no good location for one, but certain places are specially bad.

A physician might say to his patient that he has a peritonsillar abscess. The patient is apt to know from previous experience that his symptoms mean quinsy, and he may distrust his medical adviser unless he knows that peritonsillar abscess and quinsy are the same.

In this disease there is an infection of the deeper parts of the tonsil and of the tissues just below that gland with pus cocci. The probability is that these microbes have broken through the lining membranes of the tonsil crypt and have been carried a short distance into the tissues. Having been stopped there they proceed to form an abscess or boil.

One reason the tissue around the tonsil is a bad place to have a boil is because in that location the pus has trouble in finding the surface, coming to a head, and opening. On the contrary, it may get into a muscle sheath or under a layer of dense tissue and burrow a long way. In some instances it burrows into the larynx near the vocal cords and causes suffocation. In others, it bores down the neck or even into the chest.

Quinsy generally starts as a sore throat. The soreness is apt to be on one side only. In a sense it is a sore throat, yet generally the sufferer will soon realize that this sore throat is behaving a little differently. If he is a quinsy veteran he will know within a few hours, just from the feel, that this is an attack of quinsy.

There are some who advocate taking the tonsil out early in the course of quinsy. They use a vacuum tube to suck the contents of the crypts of the tonsil and then to lift the tonsil up. While it is held in this position they cut it off quickly, making no effort at careful dissection and removing the gland entire. This operation, they say, removes the focus of infection and either opens up the peritonsillar abcess or, at the very least, makes an easy route through which it can open on the surface. As a further argument for this method they say that quinsy is a recurrent disease, almost a habit. This is so because the cocci reside in the tonsil crypts ready always to invade and set up a new attack. This little operation breaks the chain.

THE TOBACCO DOES NOT SPILL OUT

Good tobaccos . . . real good tobaccos . . . that's the reason for Lucky Strike's fine, smooth quality. We use only the center leaves of the finest Turkish and domestic tobacco plants. Not the top leaves — because those are under-developed. Not the bottom leaves — because those are inferior in quality. We use only the center leaves — because these are the mildest leaves — fully ripe for perfect smoking. Only these choice tobaccos are used to make Luckies — so round, so firm, so fully packed — and no loose ends to spill out. That's why Luckies are always mild and smooth. That's why always "Luckies please". And don't forget — "It's toasted" — for throat protection — for finer taste.

New York's Hyde Park.

Among his other good qualities, Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, new police commissioner of New York City, possesses hard sense. This he demonstrated Sunday when he said he would encourage, rather than try to prevent, radicals from making speeches in Union Square.

"The more they talk, the less harm they are likely to do," he reasoned. "The situation that might make me change my mind would be the formation of a mob howling its head off for its own rights and howling hard enough to interfere with the rights of others."

Gen. O'Ryan's statement makes it appear that the country is beginning to appreciate the value of the formula which England long ago discovered for dealing with people who desire to express revolt: let them express it under government protection. The soap boxes in Hyde Park are as important to the preservation of the empire as the royal succession. Soldiers and sailors, symbols of the forces which have won and held England's far-flung possessions, stroll past in happy indifference to the Communists, Anarchists and political what-nots of every crimson shade who shout doom to imperialism, its satraps and its puppets.

Gen. O'Ryan has deserved well of his country. Perhaps he would do it further service by encouraging an American Hyde Park in Union Square.

Grau Steps Out.

Perhaps the most significant thing in connection with the selection of Carlos Hevia, secretary of agriculture, as President of Cuba to succeed Grau San Martin, is that the designation has the approval of Carlos Mendieta, the Nationalist leader.

Although political conditions in the island are in a state of flux, complicated by rumors and threats of coups d'etat, it appears that there are present at least the elements of a composition of the situation that might lead to recognition by the United States. Without such recognition no Cuban government can hope to achieve real political stability.

In the designation of Hevia, the left wingers of the junta which overthrew De Cespedes and put Grau San Martin into office, apparently suffered a reverse. Under the leadership of Antonio Guiteras, the leftists have desired no change; they have wanted to maintain Grau in office by military force if necessary, despite the fact that he has several times expressed a wish to retire. He has recognized the apparent impossibility of crystallizing popular support behind him, the stipulation which President Roosevelt made for recognition by this Government.

The selection of a representative of the junta who is agreeable to Mendieta indicates that perhaps negotiations are under way for elections which will lead to constitutional selection of a president. Mendieta does not desire the provisional presidency because it would preclude him from running in an election. It becomes significant, therefore, that a man whom he approves should be given the place temporarily. The plan, apparently, is to produce a formula by which Cuba can transfer power from the junta to the people, with the hope that such a formula will produce a more cooperative attitude from the United States.

The British Capital Market.

Despite the marked increase in business activity during the past year, the British market for new capital issues still remains in a depressed condition. There was a considerable increase in the volume of new issues in 1933, it is true, and the totals were close to the level of 1930. However, in Great Britain, as in the United States, government borrowing has accounted for the greater part of the new capital issues floated last year. British government issues amounted to £150,800,000 out of a total of £244,800,000 of new offerings. Domestic issues, chiefly industrial, amounted to only £33,700,000, a slight advance over the preceding year, but, otherwise, the lowest figure recorded during the depression period.

Moreover, as the Economist says, analysis of the statistics shows that there has been no "appreciable resumption of the foreign lending which once played so important a role on the city scene." The chief effect of better business and the reduction in interest rates which followed the government's conversion operations is shown by an increase in industrial issues, offered at lower rates of interest, to replace outstanding obligations. Such conversion operations have been greatly assisted by easy money and general business improvement.

The resultant scaling down of fixed interest charges is regarded by the Economist as a hopeful sign that the stage is being set for a revival of the stock market when borrowing corporations have completed the refinancing process. The absence of borrowing on account of the heavy industries is less reassuring, because it shows that industrial expansion still lies in the future. Great Britain, like our own country, awaits a revival of the capital market, subsisting meantime largely upon government offerings.

Continued Uncertainty.

Those who had hoped that definitive devaluation of the dollar would be achieved in one operation, accompanied by an undertaking to stabilize its exchange value at a corresponding level, will be disappointed by the indefinite and uncertain commitments contained in the President's message.

After stating that the time has come for a "more certain determination of the gold value of the dollar," the President adds that he does "not believe it desirable in the public interest that an exact value be now fixed." In other words the general uncertainties of the managed currency policy are perpetuated.

With the future gold value of the dollar left indeterminate, it is obviously impossible to undertake to stabilize its external value permanently. The most that could be expected, given existing uncertainties, would be a promise to maintain its exchange value at a rate corresponding to the new value of the dollar until such time as a further devaluation shall be decreed. There is, therefore, as might be expected, no promise of final stabilization contained in the President's message. He merely asks Congress to set up a $2,000,000,000 fund out of the profits of devaluation for the purpose of bringing "some greater degree of stability to foreign exchange rates in the interests of our people."

Since even this first approach to stabilization is likely to result in an inflow of funds calculated to advance dollar exchange rates, the fund probably will be needed chiefly to prevent the dollar from rising above the 60 per cent upper limit. Certainly, other countries are likely to regard it as a device for keeping the value of the dollar at an arbitrarily determined low level corresponding neither to its comparative domestic purchasing power nor to its status as the currency of a country which is a net creditor on current international account.

With large gold reserves in its possession, armed with power to buy and sell gold at home and abroad freely, as well as to deal in foreign exchange, the Treasury can, no doubt, fix and maintain the exchange value of the dollar for a time at least, at any rate which it may select. But the value of the dollar in terms of other currencies depends not only upon what we choose to decree that it shall be, but also upon what other nations are induced or compelled to do in retaliation or in defense of their own currencies.

Ever since the Administration rejected the stabilization proposals discussed last summer at the London Conference the danger of international monetary warfare has been an ever-present menace. The truce that has existed in recent months has been due mainly to a policy of watchful waiting on the part of other countries to see whether our monetary experiments would produce the results anticipated. If the gold-purchase policy had succeeded in raising domestic prices, for instance, by an amount sufficient to neutralize the effect of exchange depreciation, the incentive to match our efforts to depreciate the dollar by resorting to like tactics would not have been present. In that case the supposed export advantages due to dollar depreciation would have been offset by higher domestic production costs.

Under such conditions, stabilization of the dollar at a much lower rate would not have been regarded as a threat to the trade of other countries, or as a menace to the stability of their currencies. But tentative stabilization subject to change at any time, and undertaken without consideration for the effect upon the currencies and the trading relationships of the rest of the world, can be regarded as a challenge which may well lead to increasing monetary uncertainty throughout the world.

Turning The Dials.

Of the many keen-edged tools which science has placed at the disposal of humanity the radio is, from the educational viewpoint, perhaps the most significant. What has been accomplished by this agency to date is no portent of its possibilities. Indeed the imagination recoils at the vistas opened by a mechanism which can bring into every home a distillate of civilization's accomplishments in almost every field of knowledge and culture.

To say that the radio has as yet touched only the fringe of the potential development which lies ahead is merely to state the obvious. A most thought-producing pastime is to stand before the cabinet during an idle evening hour and turn the dial slowly through the broadcast band. The melange of jazz music, feeble wise-cracking, sonorous advertising and banal speeches which tumbles forth is more than adequate to topple faith in the ability of humanity to utilize the fruits which science strews before us. If this is the sort of stuff with which we fill our atmosphere, one is disposed to cry, let us at least leave the stratosphere inviolate and free from human intrusion!

Yet, as the dial slips through its arc, there are almost invariably some stations at which the listener will pause in willing subjection to a program which illustrates those potentialities on which the blah and blurbing rests as a disfiguring scum. And, whatever, the reason, it would seem as though imperceptibly the quality of broadcasting is improving, perhaps in somewhat the same slow upward spiral which in a quarter of a century has brought the movies from saccharine hodge-podge to a level of presentations which can often be called real art.

This radio development, of which many patient listeners are now becoming hopefully conscious, is strikingly illustrated in the field of educational broadcasting by a report just published in volume form by the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education. Here are outlined, by the various sponsors, the progress made in regular radio programs, given by impartial authorities, in such fields as law, industrial relations, economic problems, vocational guidance, international relations, juvenile entertainment, and so on. And interspersed in the report is much thoughtful comment tending to show that the public reaction to worthwhile programs is as favorable as it is adverse to the twaddle customarily hurled on the long-suffering ether.

The present session of Congress will probably see attempts to control radio advertising. But even without Congressional interference it is probable that standards will improve. The average radio performance of the past has been below any but the more debased levels of public taste. Commercial success alone demands the improvement in quality which is already becoming perceptible.

A Great Administrator.

Walker D. Hines, who died Sunday in Italy, was a leading figure in two significant experiments which have been made in this country in the past two decades. One was the Government's wartime operation of railroads; the other the rationalization of the textile industry by voluntary effort of the manufacturers.

In setting up the war-time railroad administration, William G. McAdoo drew heavily upon the background and experience of Mr. Hines, who served first as his assistant director-general. When Mr. McAdoo resigned in 1919, Mr. Hines became director-general and retained the post for more than a year, until the roads were handed back to their owners. While a stanch defender of the efficiency of the war-time administration of the railroads, Mr. Hines was careful to emphasize that the experiment was unconvincing as an argument either for or against permanent operation and ownership by the state.

It was his judgement that Government ownership was not in the public interest, because, as he said: "The country is too vast, its railroad mileage too extensive, to admit of the satisfactory concentration in time of peace of all railroad operation under a single direction." He concluded that private operation under proper regulation, "gives initiative, elasticity, efficiency and responsiveness to public needs, and a minimum of strain on the political system of the country."

Mr. Hines was called upon, in 1926, to rescue the textile industry from the chaos into which it had been thrown. The shift of the preponderance of the industry from North to South, with the heavy duplication of manufacturing plants, plus the unrestrained operation of existing plants, had created a situation which made the textile industry one of the most chaotic in the country. Mr. Hines and his able young assistant, George Sloan, secured voluntary agreements limiting hours, eliminating night work for women and children and otherwise improving the standards and efficiency of the industry. Those gains were written into the textile code formulated under the NRA as the first code for a major industry. It was the groundwork which Mr. Hines and Mr. Sloan had laid which made it possible for that code to be adopted quickly.

Our Measure Of Time.

Back in the days when monarchs were all that the word implies, Augustus Caesar added a day to August, the month of his birth, to put it on a par with July, which commemorates Julius Caesar. It would scarcely be worth while to estimate the cost of that act of vanity during the last 1,942 years. Even the energy spent by calendar reformers in trying to correct this and other irregularities in the measurement of time is considerable. But it is worthy of note that persistent efforts are still being made to substitute for the Roman calendar a more systematic measure of time.

Interest in this subject is attested by the fact that 29 nations have appointed committees to confer with the League of Nations regarding it. The Eastern Orthodox Church, with a membership of 140,000,000 persons, recently indorsed the so-called world calendar. Its action is especially significant because much of the opposition to calendar reform has come from churches and other organizations that oppose the shifting of significant historical dates. If opposition from these sources are overcome, the difficulties of securing a new calendar will be greatly minimized.

Adoption of a 13-month calendar now seems to be out of the question. Most of the reformers appear to be swinging to the improved 12-month calendar of 364 days plus one year day that would not be placed in any month. Under this plan the year can be divided into equal quarters, each containing precisely 13 weeks. Each quarter would begin with a month containing 31 days, and would contain two other months of 30 days each. Every month would contain 26 workings days, thus eliminating most of the irregularities between the months so far as business statistics are concerned.

In view of the fact that the solar year is 11 minutes less than 365¼ days it is probably impossible to devise a calendar without irregularities. But many improvements can be made in the present system.

A Plague on Both Your Houses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The outstanding virtue of The Post's editorial policy lies in its iconoclastic attitude toward the foibles of the present Administration. It lacks constructive value because it is obviously supporting the standpat Republican conservatism that is as dead as a doornail. So reactionary has this position become under Mr. Hoover's leadership that it has even transformed the party into a champion of States' rights.

To turn to the virtue of your criticisms, no sane citizen can fail to commend most heartily Carlisle Bargeron's biting sarcasm on the new bureaucracy and your analysis of the fiscal situation of the Government under present policies. The unscrupulous money changers are still proposing the lending of more money and the Administration presents no alternative.

But what reason is there to suppose that turning to Republican policy would alter the situation? What difference is there between the two grand old parties? The shadow-boxing show between the plutocratic "partisans" in the Congress would be funny if the situation were not so fraught with danger.

For years, on down through the Coolidge economy program, both parties have preached economy and practiced increased extravagance, and in the present situation the Republicans are worthless as an opposition because their program, in so far as it is not identical, is worse. They must perforce accept the pump-priming fallacy as to Government expenditure even though it is obvious that instead of priming the pump it is draining the well, not only because they started the idea, but because they still have no alternative to suggest.

ALDEN A. POTTER.

"The Parasitic Wayfarer."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Personally I think a fighting man is worth a carload of parasitic wayfarers," so says Leslie Lawrence, of Berkeley, Calif. But did he ever stop to think how many "parasitic wayfarers" are ex-service men?

Were you ever approached, in one of our larger cities, by one of these "parasitic wayfarers," requesting a meal on the strength of his honorable discharge, which he would promptly produce as evidence, to prove himself a worthy cause? It is 15 years since the conclusion of the World War. Many who were between the ages of 14 and 16, just a little too young for service during the war, but fired with that spirit of patriotic fervor, were kept from volunteering only because of their parents' objections, whose consent was necessary due to their youthfulness. So, therefore, they could neither volunteer nor be drafted, as so many of these "fighting men" were. Now, due to the economic depression, over which they have no control, they are unemployed, so, therefore, "parasitic wayfarers."

Let us turn back the pages of time to the winter of 1914, 15 years after the Spanish-American War. Should an economic dpression as great as the one facing us today have hit us then, our "fighting man" of today, through no fault of his own, but due to lack of work, might have found himself in the same predicament as the "parasitic wayfarer" of today, and might have been referred to as such, by a "fighting man" of the Spanish-American War.

To sum it up, I have come to this conclusion: The Spanish War veteran, the World War veteran, and the man who barely missed out on the latter, are no better or worse than their fellowmen. Two have already defended their country, and I am sure the other will do so should the occasion arise.

G. C. GRIFFIN.

The Traffic Department Defended.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Getting a License Plate," appearing in Monday's Post, interested me mainly because it revealed such appalling ignorance of services rendered by the traffic department to the rank and file of car owners and drivers in Washington. I know whereof I speak.

For two years we have owned and operated a car in this city, and each time it became necessary to renew the license plates we have received, unsolicited, a notice of requirements, including the amount of tax on the car, the cost of plates, &c., and have been informed that if we added 10 cents to the amount due, our tags would be delivered by messenger to our door in a few days. We have taken advantage of this simple arrangement. Our plates were in our hands before the 15th of December, 1933. We keep the traffic bureau informed of correct address.

"A POST FAN."

Discussing Bank Loans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will the $9,000,000 loans made to the 13 big New York banks benefit the public as stated? Why loan them these millions when they already possess billions of capital, millions of surplus and undivided profits, supplemented with country bank reserves and deposits of additional millions?

Have the millions loaned the bankrupt railroads benefited the public when paid to these banks to pay off defaulted loans? A more efficient supervision and creation of a department where all loans would be listed and investigated and the ability of borrowers to repay ascertained, would prevent the looting and losses to such institutions; if not, Congress should enact a law (like China) to cut off the heads of every banker, employe, income tax chiseler or public servant who embezzles public funds, thus relieving our overcrowded State and Federal prisons, when justice will then be served.

JOHN H. SPRING.

Herndon, Va.

Present Day "Economy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The old conception of economy "in two nutshells" had as its basis frugality and thrift, the judicious use of time, money and material; freedom from waste and extravagance, and the avoidance of these in the conduct and management of households, business affairs, Government, &c.; conservation, the laying up or putting aside for or against the day when this period of prosperity should come to an end.

Real economic problems are not solved by supposititious cases arbitrarily set up, but by the practical application of devices and means having their birth in observation and experience and by individuals who are familiar with the details of the subject in hand.

We have, however, a new crop of professors of economies who would have us believe that the ancient ideas have outlived their usefulness and are no longer applicable in this "machine age;" that we can afford to throw the principles and institutions of democracy overboard, and take the exact opposite course; that the road to our future economic welfare and existence consists in extravagance in governmental; business and individual expenditure, and this theory insofar as the Government is concerned has been put into practice.

Since the practice of thrift and frugality and the application of practical economy have brought us to our present state of progress and prosperity, we can afford to indulge ourselves in some reckless spending, curtail our production and dissipate our inheritance.

No one need concern himself about economy in the conduct of his home or business affairs. The individual is relieved of all responsibility for his own weal. The Government takes all this off his hands. We have invented problematical schemes and set up Governmental agencies that take care of everything. Uncle Sam will see to it that the turkey and all the side dishes are brought to our table ready to serve. What a delightful dream for the Socialist and Communist! A delightful dream, if it does not turn out to be a nightmare.

A Bank Can't Get Along With "Pretty Good" Addition

By Robert Quillen

Tom and Dick and Harry were boys in school together. Being dull or lazy, or a little of both, they were content to "get by."

With the help of a little charity, all three graduated from high school with a general average of 70. Since that percentage entitled them to a diploma, they saw no reason to strive for more.

At higher institutions of learning they got D's, which meant 70, and at length they began the job of earning a living—all equipped for the job as first-class 70 per centers.

Tom was a surgeon. When he took out tonsils he got 70 per cent and left the other 30. When he sewed up an incision, 70 per cent of the stitches behaved properly and the others got infected. In all cases, both in diagnosis and in whittling, he did a 70 per cent job. And 30 of each 100 patients died as a direct result of his blunders.

Dick became an architect. When he figured up a bill of materials for a building, he set down 70 per cent of the stuff needed. When he figured stresses and strains, and the tensile strength of cables, he got 70 per cent of the right answer. In figuring costs he always got within 30 per cent of the right figure, and he always had 70 per cent of a job done on contract time.

Harry was less important. He was a mere "trouble shooter" for a telephone company. He kept 70 per cent of the phones in good order, fixed each phone so the user could hear 70 per cent of the conversation (usually enough, anyway), and got only 30 per cent of his wires connected wrong at cable ends.

You will say, perhaps, that these lads should have gone into politics and landed in Congress where a mere 30 per cent shortage doesn't show.

But this is serious. They didn't go into politics, but they drifted down and down until at last they reached the level where a man can do 70 per cent work and still hold his job—at $2.40 a day.

Numerous morals suggest themselves. One is that you haven't learned a thing until you know it, and an honest diploma should read: "70 per cent educated."

Another is that habit soon jells and you can't expect much of a man who long has been content to make the 70 required for passing.

Manhattanite on Skis.

("Former Mayor Walker of New York is among those daily enjoying the skiing at St. Moritz."—News item.)

The ice and snow like silken sheets
Lie on the slopes of St. Moritz—
There are no cares or troubles there,
A joy of living fills the air,
And down the slope comes Jimmy whizzing—
With all those budget worries missing!

II.

He scrambles up the mountains white
With banter gay and comment light;
A moment's pause, and presto! he
Is off with great alacrity,
A laughing, merry, happy, gay man—
With nothing to discuss with Lehman!

III.

A figure flashes in the Alps,
Far, far above the people's scalps,
Far, far above the crowds and masses;
A Mercury of Alpine passes
Is Jimmy on his lightning skis—
Far, far from all emergencies.

IV.

The Alps are high, the Alps are steep,
The Alps are quite a place to leap;
The Alps provide a vista pretty,
But none at all of New York City;
The Alps have most majestic ranges—

V.

A sort of flying, leaping shimmy—
And down the slope there comes Our Jimmy!
The snows of St. Moritz embrace him—
And there no budget problems face him.

VI.

The snow flies up like white confetti
As Jimmy skis and so does Betty;
What fun! One leap and then another,
With no affairs of state to bother.
The sunsets there are red and yellow—

VII.

A life of leaping and of gliding;
The Alps are high, the Alps are tall,
The Alps are far from City Hall . . .
And even when the weather's warmer

THE ART OF CONVERSATION.

Enlivening conversation with intelligent and agreeable men and women is one of the highest, most satisfactory, and most rewarding pleasures of life. It must of course be natural, unaffected, spontaneous; it would be terrible if a group gathered and one of them said, "Let us now have some witty and clever conversation." A result like that can not come from will power, any more than happiness and peace of mind can come from an effort of will. It takes at least two to play the game of talk; and half a dozen are better than two. Those who converse must have some ideas and some talent for easy expression; and the fine art of listening is as important as the art of talking. The reason why I hate controversy and debate is because neither combatant listens to his antagonist; while the other is speaking, he hunts around in his mind for more ammunition. Thus the only result of controversy is that at the end each man has convinced himself and produced not the slightest effect on the other.

Then there are men who monopolize conversation; even if only a very few intimate friends are present, this kind of bore stands up in front of the fireplace and makes a stump speech. How much more attractive it is to hear a public speaker whose address sound like intimate conversation than to hear a conversationalist whose talk sounds like a public address!

Consideration, modesty, wholehearted listening are essential characteristics of one who would practice the art of conversation. And I can recommend two good books on the subject: "Hints Toward an Essay on Conversation," by Jonathan Swift, and an "Essay on Conversation," written 200 years later by Henry W. Taft.

Present Experiments Enough.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

There has never before in history been a time when a government has so openly taken money from one group of its citizens to hand it to another. On top of all this, the Administration is attempting to boost farm prices by undertaking deliberately to depress the purchasing power of the dollar.

In the face of this record, it appears as ungrateful as it is inaccurate to accuse the Government of neglecting the interests of agriculture. It has gone much farther than any other administration has ever gone; much farther than many of our people believe that it should have gone. Its measures have only just been introduced. They have not yet been given a fair trial. It would seem to be the counsel of wisdom to give them a chance before rushing on into a further experiment which can end only in certain disaster.

Hesse Royal Couple End Stay in Capital

Prince and Princess Christian Depart for New York After Week-End Stay; the Duchess of Northumberland May Be Guest in Washington.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society is always on the lookout for visiting royalty and members of the nobility, many of whom are guests in Washington each year, and have numerous friends who entertain in their honor.

The Prince and Princess Christian of Hesse are the most recent visitors, having left only last evening after a week-end at the Mayflower.

This was their first trip to Washington in ten years, and followed a visit with the father of the princess, Mr. Richard Reid Rogers, of 610 Park avenue, New York City. The princess, the former Miss Elizabeth Reid Rogers, spent her girlhood days in Washington when her father was chairman and general counsel of the Panama Canal Commission.

Couple Will Visit British Royalty.

After another stay of three or four weeks in New York the Prince and Princess will sail for London, where they are taking a house for the spring months. Their daughter, Princess Augusta, who is now in Cannes with her younger sister, Princess Olga, will be presented privately at the Court of St. James because of her relationship to the King of England. Her great-grandfather and the grandfather of King George were brothers. Prince Richard Christian and Prince Valdemar, young sons of Prince Christian and the Princess of Hesse, are now attending Eaton in England.

Prince Christian first visited Washington in 1912, when he was sent on an official trip as an officer of the German navy by the Kaiser, his uncle by marriage.

The House of Percy In British History.

The Duchess of Northumberland, who will arrive in New York today to spend some time at the Plaza, will in all probability come to Washington for a brief stay. Last spring the Duchess and her two daughters, Lady Elizabeth Ivy Percy and Lady Diana Evelyn Percy, were the guests of the Minister of Canada and Mrs. William Duncan Herridge while in the Capital and were brilliantly entertained.

The House of Percy is one of the most interesting families in English history. The first of the Percys in England was William de Percy, a Norman chieftain, who accompanied William the Conqueror on his momentous voyage in 1066, coming from a village named Percy near Villedieu in Normandy. This Percy was known among his contemporaries as "als Gernons," meaning "with the whiskers," and from which the name Algernon was derived.

The family became famous and distinguished itself in the Crusades, and the perennial wars of the times. In 1391 Henry de Percy, ninth feudal lord and first Lord Percy, was one of the great barons who defied Pope Boniface VIII.

This same Lord Percy's great-great-great-grandson was the Sir Henry Percy celebrated by Shapespeare as "Hotspur." He was also the Percy in the ballad of Chevy Chase which begins "The Percy out of Northumberland."

The family attained ducal rank in 1714. The present duke is the seventh Duke of Somerset. He is also Earl of Percy, Baron Warkworth, Lord Lovaine, and Baron of Alnwick. The seats of the family are Alnwick Castle, Warkworth Castle, Leilder Castle and Prudhoe Castle, all in Northumberland, and should the family weary of any of these they can go to the estates in Middlesex, Darlington or Surrey.

Old Furniture Shop Restores Antique Charm

Advice on Decorating and Refinishing Service Combined.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

There's a lure in old furniture. One slides open a drawer and wonders whose letters once lay within. One touches the smooth, rich surface of a table top and wonders whose dishes were once laid out on it. There are few people who don't succumb to the charm of old things, but unfortunately few pocketbooks are able to succumb to the prices of them.

A young man who runs a shop on Wisconsin avenue has a distinct ability to collect charming old-fashioned furniture. In his shop a little Martha Washington sewing table, made of mahogany, inlaid with satin-wood is waiting to be bought for only $15. A tip-top mahogany table over 100 years old is $35. It is an example of colonial style. The round top is about 40 inches across. It will fit charmingly into innumerable settings. A solid walnut drop-leaf table that will comfortably seat four persons is only $20.

The shop proprietor is a graduate in interior decoration, and can help you plan your home furnishings.

Two-Purpose Bridge Table.

A department store is selling wooden tip-top bridge tables for $5. They are gracefully shaped and can be used as hall tables when the cards are put away.

Some are painted black with hand-painted floral designs on top, others with Japanese scenes on them, for $10. The tables are lovely as fire screens and would fit well into a modern setting.

During January it is a wise thing to stock up on underwear, because good quality is appearing with a low price. Lovely lace-trimmed underthings—slips, dance sets, chemises and shorts—in three colors—white, blue and peach—sell at $1.50. Silk crepe lace-trimmed nightgowns are only $1.95.

Another bargain offers itself in kid gloves in all colors, styles and sizes, ready to be put on milady's slender hand. The price is $1.95. Romeo's rantings about "Would I were the glove * * *" continuing into a sigh of longing to touch her cheek—we forget the exact quotation—is all very well, but Romeo himself was not as good a bargain as this one.

White Elephants.

A "white elephant" is a hoodoo as a figure of speech, but as a knick-knack for the house, the right kind makes a cunning keepsake. The Orientals long have spent fortunes on their white elephant pets, but you can buy one in a Washington shop for as little as 50 cents. We do not suggest that you get as big a one as the Orientals, for it might be inconvenient to keep one in a modern two-room flat. The white elephants in the shop stand about two inches high, and are made of a pearl composition, the delicate color counteracting the ferocity of the animal's attitude. For his trunk is held high with a royal snort, and he looks like the pampered pet of kings. He will be quite at home on the parlor table.

Now that wines are back, to be drunk if not bought, you'll need an appropriate decanter. White wines are to be served chilled but not iced, and this decanter will take care of that beautifully. A little compartment opening out of the side of the bottle will take care of the ice, chilling the wine without diluting it. The bottle is of green glass, and is decorated with a colored straw wrapping that gives it quite an air. The decanters, 50 cents.

For Baby's First Stroll.

If the rock-a-by-baby age is over and the pride and joy of the house is ready to take walks like grown folks, he'll need an appropriate outfit. Little hand-knit suits in an adorable shade of blue are on sale for $2.95. The outfit consists of a sweater, leggins, and cap and gloves to match. Any baby with an inborn sense of style will chortle with glee wearing this lovely piece of handiwork.

But baby in the cradle needs to be stylishly clothed as well. And it is no exaggeration to say that exquisitely, hand-embroidered baby dresses are only $1. Sounds as if we were fooling, but it is so. Embroidered baby pillows that would make his infant majesty smile with serene supremacy are from 19 cents to $2.95. They vary in beauty of workmanship as well as price, and so can fit the varying purses admirably.

Those who know and love pottery will know the beauty of the pottery from Denmark. Those to whom Denmark pottery is a new experience might appreciate a little introduction. In either event, an assortment ranging in price from $1 to $9 is being sold in a department store. There is among the collection a little candlestick that is quaint and charming, for only $1.50, and a little flat bowl of a rich shade of blue for $1. The large vases are suitable for decoration either empty or filled with flowers. The finish of the pottery is superbly smooth, and as the clerk said, "it's like the skin you love to touch."

A Good Dinner Gets Off to a Better Start With Amber-Clear Consomme or Bouillon

By Ann Barrett.

If you want a dinner to end well, it's a good idea to start it well. And there no start (in cool weather, at least) that's so just-right as a clear soup. (The kind Joan Crawford prefers above all others.) Say bouillon. Or an amber-clear consomme—sending off the subtle, appetizing aroma of a dozen different ingredients expertly blended.

Such a soup stimulates, makes you feel right away that all is well. But doesn't dull the appetite for the rest of the dinner as a heavier soup does. And (in case you're side-stepping increased weight) doesn't add up much in calories.

Such good soup comes out of cans. But if you get a kick out of cooking, and want to learn the professional hows and whys of making clear soups, here are the recipes. First, consomme—made from chicken, beef and veal, and well spiced with herbs. Second, bouillion—made just from beef, with less herb flavor. Best allow two days for making either of these two soups properly—they must be sparkling-clear and free from every speck of fat.

Consomme.

For consomme, you'll need meat and bone as follows: ½ of a 4-lb. raw fowl (use just the dark meat for this, if you like, and keep the choice white meat for something else), 2 lbs. uncooked chicken bones, 2 lbs. lean beef cut small, 1 piece marrow bone (about 1 lb.), 2 lbs. veal knuckle-bone. Now dig a little marrow out of the marrow bone, melt it in heavy fry pan, and brown one-half the beef in it thoroughly. Then put all the meat and bone into large kettle with 2½ quarts cold water and 2 teaspoons salt. Let stand at least 1 hour.

Next, bring this very slowly to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer (covered) about 3 hours, skimming off scum as it rises to top. Then add following vegetables and seasonings: ¼ cup each sliced carrot, celery, onion, turnip, ½ teaspoon whole black peppers, ¼ teaspoon each thyme and marjoram (ask druggist if grocer hasn't these), 1 teaspoon parsley and ½ bay leaf. Simmer another hour.

Next, strain soup and let stand till cold (overnight is best). Then remove every bit of fat that has formed on top. Then taste, and add more seasoning if not just right for you. Now you are ready for clearing.

For each quart of stock in kettle, beat up 1 egg-white with 2 teaspoons cold water. Add this to soup stock, together with 1 crushed egg-shell for each quart. Bring very slowly to a boil, and boil 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Then push pot to back of stove and let stand 20 minutes without stirring. Finally (yes, this is the end) strain soup through fine sieve (first lined with double thickness of cheesecloth). Reheat and serve hot. Or (very popular in summer) pour into bouillon cups and let stand till jellied and very cold.

Now maybe you understand better why I dropped the hint about canned consomme! But I felt I had to give this recipe some time or other, else you might think I was holding out on you.

Bouillon.

Bouillon (a shade less smart and elegant for formal dinners, though very good) takes fewer ingredients. Here's how: Buy 1 pound marrow bone and 4 pounds lean beef (round is best) cut in small pieces. Melt some of marrow from bone, brown half the meat in it, then put into large kettle with 2½ quarts cold water and 2 teaspoons salt. Let soak at least one hour. Next bring to a boil very slowly, cover, reduce heat and simmer five hours, skimming off scum as it rises to top. Then add 1-3 cup each sliced onion, carrot, turnip, celery and simmer one hour longer. From here on do exactly as directed in consomme recipe.

Note—For a bouillon that will jelly (you might like it next summer) reduce the water used in this recipe to 1½ quarts and add 2 pounds of veal knuckle bone.

Tomato Bouillon.

For this popular variation, combine 5 cups of bouillon from above recipe with the following: Two cups canned tomatoes, tiny piece bay leaf, 4 whole cloves, 6 whole black peppers, ¼ cup chopped celery leaves, 2 teaspoons chopped onion. Cook 20 minutes. Then clear again with egg and shell as directed above. For a slick company garnish to this heat 8 oysters in their own juice till edges curl. Put 2 of these into each serving of bouillon.

Grated Parmesan cheese (passed at the table) makes another nice touch. Or slivers of fresh vegetables such as carrot, celery, string beans (cooked separately) and spooned into individual servings of soup. (This slight touch changes the name of the soup to consomme or bouillon Julienne!)

Send for More Recipes.

Perhaps you'd like to have recipes for some favorite thick soups, too. Such as beef-vegetable, chicken-needle, minestrone, Philadelphia pepper-pot and so on. Smartness of Modern Type Lingerie Depends On Its Being Cut to Fit Without a Wrinkle

New York, Jan. 15.—It's fit that counts in determining the smartness of today's lingerie. Everyone has her pet color and material and will argue the virtues of white, pink, peach or blue crepe de chine, glove silk, satin, ninon and sheer cotton. But there's no argument about the fact that lingerie which isn't fitted smoothly and neatly is as antiquated as long red flannels.

Lingerie of the types described is available in Washington in all the better class shops.

It's all the doings of the modern silhouette. A sheath-like dress is anything but—if it's put on over underthings which are bunchily gathered or ruffled.

So today's smart lingerie has a definitely tailored look. Though that doesn't necessarily mean untrimmed.

Flat Trimmings.

It means designed on clean-cut, moulded body lines and trimmed in flat ways which won't add bulk. And all sorts of clever bias cuts have been devised to give this flatness plus fullness where necessary.

Slips, as you can see in the sketch, recognize the presence of a bust, and some are cut with almost uplift bandeau tops.

Panties must be flat through the hips. So smooth, snug-fitting tops are the thing. Side buttons are preferred to elastic, though elastic used just in back still lets the front remain smooth.

The top of panties is sometimes cut plain as the pair being examined by the girls in the picture and sometimes has a shaped yoke.

Trimmings are restricted to contrasting bindings or pipings to laces (Alencon types are still favorites) applied in flat ways, to flat contrasting color appliques or a tiny bit of delicate embroidery.

There's a new idea or two in underthings which should intrigue anyone looking for novelty.

Taffeta Petticoats.

One is the invention of Mainbocher, the American-Paris designer. It's to wear a taffeta . . . yes, good, old-fashioned taffeta . . . petticoat in a color which matches the trimming on your dress.

And another we've had sketched for you . . . the long-sleeved nightgown. Old-fashioned sounding, too, but very modern in its interpretation. For they're cut to look for all the world like smart, long-skirted dresses.

Balanced Diet Best Aid to Real Beauty

Menu Should Contain Fresh Vegetables, Fruits and Meat.

The dining table sometimes does damage that the dressing table can't repair, so it is necessary for beauty's sake as well as for health's sake to have well-balanced meals.

Menu.

Tomato Juice
Swiss Cream Steak
Mashed Potatoes Creamed Peas
Watercress Salad French Dressing
Pineapple Slices
Milk or Coffee

Swiss Cream Steak

2 pounds round steak
2 onions
½ cup sour cream
½ cup water
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons grated cheese
Paprika
Salt and pepper

Cut meat into pieces for serving. Dust with pepper, salt and paprika, and brown on both side in butter. Add sliced onions, water and cream to which grated cheese has been added. Cover the pan tightly and let simmer until the meat is tender.

The Double That Tells Too Much.

Sometimes even though a player feels sure that he can defeat an adverse contract, the Double for penalties is unwise because it gives too much information to the Declarer and suggests a line of play that, without the Double, would not be considered. The purpose, of course, of the Penalty Double is to increase the reward for defeating a contract, not as some players sometimes appear to think, to suggest an unusual line of play to the Declarer.

East, in the hand below, had reason to hope that he could defeat the adverse contract, but he should have known that a Double of it reduced the chance to a minimum because, to a great extent, it must place certain cards in his hand.

The hand was played at Crockford's Club, New York, where the experts gather in what is unquestionably the hardest Contract game in the United States today. The North and South players were Messrs. Walter Malowan and Walter Beinecke.

South, dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

East's Opening lead was the Knave of clubs, and the Queen was played from Dummy. West, of course, played the King, and North ruffed. East's holding of cards was now quite apparent to North. The only question was the length of his trump suit. If he held either four or five spades to the Ace-Ten, the contract could not be made, but if the Double was based on the spade Ace and honors in hearts and diamonds, then victory was in sight.

In order to test out the trump situation, Mr. Malowan led a small spade and won with the Knave in Dummy when East played low. The Ten of hearts was then led and won with the King by the Declarer, who now laid down the heart Knave. When East failed to cover with the Queen, the trick was permitted to run. The nine of hearts was then led, upon which East played the Queen, and the trick was ruffed with a small trump in Dummy. The next play was the lead of the King of spades, and at this point East's play was immaterial. As a matter of fact, he took the trick with the Ace and returned another club. The contract was now assured, as East's last trump was drawn and the losing diamond discarded upon the club Ace.

Had it not been for the Double, North would have had a difficult guess in the play of the heart suit. He might, for instance, have attempted to finesse in that suit or attempted to drop the Queen on the third round. In either event the contract would have been defeated.

Tomorrow's Hand.

What is West's correct Opening bid with this hand after North, East and South have passed in turn?

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If January 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:10 to 8:10 a. m., from 8:45 to 9:45 a. m. and from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 to 11 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m.

If you were born on this date, you have an ultra conservative disposition, and are inclined to be extremely conventional. You are so fearful of the adverse opinion of others, your actions cause people to feel that you are not at all sure of yourself, and the result is that you bring upon yourself the very thing you dread. You probably would find life far less complicated if you cultivate self-assurance. Do what you know is the proper thing, and do not care a rap what somebody else thinks. On this date you will be thrown in contact with some people of rather a Bohemian disposition. It would appear advisable for you to be friendly, and sympathetic with their point of view.

The child born on January 16, as it grows older, will be of a rather bashful disposition. This may be overcome by systematically encouraging it to display some initiativeness of it own. Do not let it get in the habit of being swayed by the opinion of other people. It should be taught self-reliance, and be made to give verbal expression of its ideas on various subjects discussed in its presence. January 16 children should not be brought up too strictly, or with the idea that they must always defer to the wishes of their elders.

If a woman, and born on January 16, you can have more happiness in your home, or business life, if you are more exacting in your demands. You are entitled to more attention and should insist on receiving it, in return for the amount of affection you bestow on certain of your relatives. Unselfishness is a virtue, unless you permit it to become an encouragement for the indulgence of selfish exactions on the part of others, and then you make it a weakness. Relying on your own judgment in making decisions may prove better than depending on the advice of others to guide you. If you are not married now, you will be later on. If you desire happiness in your home do not allow relatives, especially "in-laws," to intrude their ideas, or personality, in its routine.

Men born on January 16 should cultivate aggressiveness. If you were born on this date, and a man, you are too prone to defer to the opinion of others. You will advance your personal interests by overcoming a sense of timidity, or what might be termed, a feeling of inferiority.

People born on January 16, being inclined to be "stiff necked" and "straight laced," may receive a liberal education by letting down the bars of conventionality and mingling more with the common herd, so as to absorb their ideas on life in general.

Bright Child Often Problem Child, Says Capital Expert

Miss Bowler Thinks Parents Are Small Factor in Determining Causes of Their Children's Delinquency.

A few days ago on this page an interview with a leading educator, Miss Jessie La Salle, appeared, in which she gave it as her opinion that many Washington children are neglected by their mothers, and that such neglect may make them "problem children." Following is an interview with an expert in delinquency, who feels, on the contrary, that delinquency may result from causes beyond the parents' control.

By Katherine Smith.

So-called "delinquent children" are no less intelligent, and no more badly behaved, than many others who have managed to slip around the arm of the law.

"If one could only make a cross-section of this city," explained Miss Alida C. Bowler, Delinquency Unit, of the United States Children's Bureau, "and examine the homes and the children in them, one would find situations that are equal to the cases that are brought to light in the juvenile courts. They are in homes of the rich and homes of the poor. They are with parents who are interested in their children's development, and parents who neglect them.

Often Are Brightest.

"Delinquent children are those whose behavior may be such that they will need the jurisdiction of the law. This does not mean that they are feeble minded; on the contrary, some of them are exceptionally bright. They are almost always children who are full of life and the spirit of adventure, and, as living conditions nowadays take away from them opportunities to use their minds and their muscles, they use their energies breaking windows and 'swiping' things.

"As a matter of fact, the child of a friend of mine related with considerable pride her ability to swipe gum off a drug store counter. The mother was naturally embarrassed, but cases like that are not unusual. When papa pays for the gum that Junior swipes, there's no trouble, but if Junior is caught at it, it's a different matter.

"One can not lay a finger upon the cause for delinquency, nor upon the cure. Sometimes parents have preconceived ideas about the career of their child, and force him into that path, instead of trying to discover his particular talent, and lead him into that. Sometimes children suffer from educational maladjustments—they are behind in their school, they are unable to compete with quicker minds. They develop a feeling of inferiority, and to compensate, will do anything to gain attention and bring back their lost good standing. Sometimes the methods they choose are at fault, but the desire behind them is a perfectly normal one.

Washington Needs Centers.

"People should realize that these children, if removed from the surroundings that do them harm, and taken in hand soon enough, will develop into well balanced adults, working in a profession that is interesting to them.

"It is particularly important that in Washington, there should be more recreation centers for children, to offer facilities for interesting use of children's leisure time. These should be located inside the city, many of them—so that children from the various neighborhoods can use them. There should be an out-door playground for sports, and a building to take care of work in arts and crafts when the weather makes out-door activities impossible.

"Now that there are so many young boys and girls out of school, without chances to get jobs, it is of the greatest importance that recreation centers should be provided for them. Otherwise, since they have nothing to do with their time, they will fall under bad influences, and many useful lives will be ruined.

"If a child is caught doing some minor thing, and it is his first offense, the police, without taking them to the juvenile courts, try to get the families to cooperate and to interest the children in clubs, sports, and the like. It often does the trick, and a boy may use his pent-up energy kicking a football or hammering out copper book-ends instead of smashing street lights. If the child persists in being obstinate, he is taken before the court, which may make plans for a change of scenery for him, by adoption or by placing him in an institution.

"As for institutions, there are good ones and bad ones. The bad ones resort to old-fashioned methods of discipline, confinement and whipping. The good ones have accomplished wonders.

"In these institutions they have a full line of academic courses, manual training, arts and crafts, and most important of all, a substitute for the home atmosphere that the boys and girls may have lost. There are clubrooms, with books, magazines and a piano, where the boys can have something resembling home surroundings.

Then, too, these "homes" have a psychiatric clinic, which examines the children individually, in order to determine their natural talents. Sometimes when the child becomes interested in a line of work that he is able to do, he will not leave it alone, his progress along every line is improved, and it is hard to believe that he was once classed as a delinquent.

"Personally," Miss Bowler smiled, "I like the naughty ones best. The naughtier they are the brighter they are, and their naughtiness is generally due to a healthy spirit of adventure.

"At one time I used to examine delinquent children. I am by profession a psychiatrist, got my M. A. at the University of Illinois in psychology. I'd give them tests—one of my friends called me the bean tester. Yet intelligence tests are only a part of the final conclusion about a mentality. Some people might say that 6½ inches with a ruler is 6½ inches, but with minds one has to take into consideration the emotional attitude at the time of the test. Some children were arrogant, and wouldn't do the things I asked when I knew very well they could. Others were shy and confused.

"The problem of delinquency is a complex one. Every case has its own particular cause, and must have its particular cure. But unless there is a deep-seated psychopathic difficulty in a child, a lot can be done for him, if treated rightly and soon enough."

Birth Control Important In New Deal, Women Are Told

Prof. Spengler Tells Conference It Is Vital to the Nation's Economic Recovery Program that Unfit Population Be Checked.

By Elizabeth Young.

The economic success of the New Deal is directly dependent upon the willingness of this Nation to make birth control part of its recovery program.

Standing on a platform beneath an immense white banner startlingly lettered in black: "6,000,000 children in the United States are on Public Relief"—Prof. Joseph J. Spengler, noted economist, made that bold statement yesterday at the opening session of the American Conference on Birth Control and National Recovery, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel. He is a faculty member of the University of Arizona.

Part of Economic System.

"Birth control constitutes an integral part of any rational economic system, and opposition to it constitutes a tariff on the fit for the purpose of subsidizing the unfit," he declared.

Prof. Spengler expressed the belief that the NRA, unaided by birth control, is not doing all that might be expected of it.

"It is desirable," he said, "that we evolve governmental devices suited to ignite the wet powder train of recovery."

Arguing that the diminishing size of the family means a higher economic trend of life for the average man, Dr. William F. Ogburn, famous Chicago sociologist, aligned himself with Prof. Spengler in advocating intelligent control over population increase.

He maintained that the influence of an increasing population now would be to slow down the movement toward higher wages and mean a lowered standard of life.

Affects Living Standard.

"If our population were increasing less rapidly our standard of living would rise more rapidly," he said. "And any National policy in population should face squarely the issue of an increasing population, for the increase in population tends to operate against a higher standard of living for the average man, though not so for the man who profits by unearned increment.

Prof. Ogburn was a former member of the Consumers Council of the NRS and resigned following differences of opinion over policy.

"Developments following the Great War, unprecedented unemployment, the declining birth rate and the growth of nationalistic sentiment point toward the need of legislation regarding population being guided toward a common goal," he pointed out.

"It seems probable that the decrease in the size of the family has meant an increase in the number of families," he said. "There is each decade a larger and larger percentage of our adult population married. Thus, in 1890, 55.3 per cent of the adult population were married, while in 1930 60.5 per cent were married.

More Marriages.

"Young people with limited incomes knowing they can have some control over the size of their future family are more willing to marry than they would be if they knew that marriage would almost surely entail additional economic burdens."

"Man must learn to adjust his numbers to his means and resources, if war is to be outlawed, the conference was told by Warren S. Thompson, of the Scripps Foundation for Research in Population Problems.

"When population growth and pressure is governed by birth control and not 'by seizing larger resources,' then one of the most fruitful causes of international disturbance will have been removed," he said.

"Even though war may result in an easing of population pressure in some lands for a while," he said, "its benefits can be only temporary. The ultimate solution of overpopulation must be found in man's control of his numbers, not in seizing larger resources. In the long run, there is but one rational way for man to overcome poverty and to free himself from the burden of laboring with meager resources. This way is the way of birth control.

Human Welfare Endangered.

"It would seem to be time that population growth came under conscious control and was kept within such limits that human welfare was not jeopardized by an excess of numbers."

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, president of the National committee on Federal Legislation for Birth Control, prophesyed that the time is not far off when this Government will be called to face the question of birth control and sterilization as well.

"We can lay at the doors of the opponents of this movement a large part of the misery and poverty arising from the huge array of the unemployed, whose suffering, hopelessness and loss of self-respect have spread like an epidemic through the Nation," she said.

Several hundred delegates, including many physicians, both men and women, were assembled from 28 States for the opening day's session of the conference.

They were welcomed to Washington by Mrs. John F. Dryden, chairman of a group of fifty prominent Washington women organized into a reception committee. Hundreds of others, distinguished in official, educational, welfare, medical and sociological fields, are acting as sponsors of the conference.

Last evening's session was devoted to a consideration of the "religious, ethical and moral aspects of birth control," with Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church of New York City; the Rev. Russell F. Clinchy and Dr. Sidney E. Goldstein, the latter associate Rabbi of the Free Synagogue in New York, speaking.

Today's most important business will be a special afternoon meeting for physicians, to which the public will not be admitted. The morning session is to be given over to a consideration of medical and biological questions.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

The Church Supper.

There's one event in social life which changeless seems to be,
Year after year since I was just a child at mother's knee
The supper at the church has kept on goodly folks its grip,
To fashion evenings now and then for human fellowship.
But as it was long years ago I see it still today,
Though countless other customs have worn out and passed away.
Still do the mothers of the flock together meet to plan
A supper that will glad the heart of every hungry man.
Still do they bake their pans of beans and flaky chicken pie
And write their lists of this and that which each one must supply.
Still do they work the whole day long with fervor and with zeal
To set the tables and at last to cook and serve the meal.

Still when the feasting is over the soprano sings a song
And some invited speaker makes a speech that's much too long.
Then to a rising vote of thanks the weary women bow,
They did that 50 years ago, and still they do it now.

Church suppers! May they carry on in parish large or small;
Against the changing tides of life this old world needs them all;
For while they stay it's very clear there still is something good
In human hearts and something very brave in womanhood.
While groups of people gladly share church suppers now and then,
They'll keep alive, in spite of change, the faith that strengthens men.

Fur Trim's New Formal Frocks From Filmland

These Western Creations Carry Pert Little Names.

Hollywood, Jan. 15 (AP).—Formal suits for women, called by such intriguing names as "cocktail," or "five o'clock" suits, are considered quite the smartest thing for midwinter wear.

Often they are loaded with luxurious fur, with exquisite velvet blouses that are formal enough for tea dances or similar functions when the coat is removed.

Isabel Jewell wears two new formal suits in her role in "The Women in His Life," both of which were designed for her by Adrian.

One cocktail suit worn by Miss Jewell is in black broadcloth with the skirt in formal ankle length, the blouse of sheer black velvet designed with soft draped neckline and short sleeved. The wool jacket is just long enough to cover the blouse. A tiny winged hat completes the costume.

Another suit, also in block broadcloth, is trimmed with silver fox. The ensemble is designed with hip-length jacket with a high standing collar of fox that continues in bands down the jacket front and about the hipline. Deep fox cuffs, in addition to all the other fur on the jacket, make it seem almost like a fur wrap.

Accessories for this "five o'clock suit" must be quite formal, so Miss Jewell wears a black suede beret, with matching bag and gloves.

A sports ensemble designed for Mary Carlisle will meet with the average college girl's approval. It is a sheer wool frock in the new chocolate brown, with a colorful collar and weep cuffs of brown-and-biege plaid wool. The ensemble is topped by a sporty tan swagger coat with wide revers. The revers may be buttoned up around the neck for stormy weather.

Gold "lipstick" buttons that fasten one's frock from throat to hem are a new note, introduced to Hollywood by Mae Clarke. Her very tailored dress is in bright green wool, with only these gold buttons for gay accent.

Mrs. Dick Is Donor For Reading Room

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 15.—Mrs. Frank Madison Dick, librarian-general of the National organization of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has donated $1,500 to Washington College to establish and equip a reading room and library of current literature and periodicals in Reid Hall, women's dormitory. Announcement to this effect was made by President Gilbert Wilcox Mead.

Mrs. Dick is a prominent member and former regent of Dorset Chapter, D. A. R., of Dorchester County, Md., and is a resident of Cambridge and New York City. She is now traveling in South America. The contribution to the Eastern Shore college has been made in the name of Dorset Chapter and Old Kent Chapter of Kent County and will be a memorial to Elihu Cullen Dick.

The reading room is now being equipped and will be appropriately dedicated on February 22, Washington's birthday, a traditional holiday and observance at Washington College.

Women's City Club Tea Will Honor Two Guests

Mrs. Jewell Swofford, chairman of the United States Employes Compensation Commission, and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, wife of the Representative from Missouri, will be honor guests at a tea to be given by the membership committee of the Women's City Club at the clubhouse tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. Frank A. Birgfeld will be hostess, with Miss Alice Heaven, president; Mrs. William Lee Corbin, Mrs. Grace Hays Riley and Mrs. Grattan Kerans assisting. Mrs. Frank J. Kelly, Miss Alice Prigg and Miss Jesta M. Richards will preside at the tea table.

Miss Redell Attends Club Luncheon Today

In response to an invitation from the Women's National Press Club, Miss Emma Redell, Washington opera and concert star, has interrupted her concert tour in the New England States and will arrive in Washington in time to attend the Press Club luncheon today at the Willard Hotel. She will be the honor guest and will address the club.

Miss America—In the Spring

Here's a new and original version by Peggy Hoyt of that type of spring costume that has become an American classic. Blue cloth, white georgette, Irish crochet flowers, blue milan hat with Irish crochet flowers, create an ensemble, which is the epitome of youth and chic. Posed by Miss Kitty Kane.

Peggy Hoyt is one little girl from Michigan who made a name for herself—a name that has become synomous with beautiful hats and gowns. She not only makes them—she is pretty enough to wear them, too!

Art's in Style, Says Mrs. Roosevelt

She Sees Lots of Hope for Talent Under CWA System.

It has become fashionable to be interested in the arts, Mrs. Roosevelt told her press conference yesterday.

"Since the artists have been aided by the CWA many people who were formerly uninterested in the arts have become enthusiastic about them," the First Lady said.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that evidence of the increased interest in the fine arts was shown by the fact that at a recent meeting of art dealers in New York figures showed that more medium-priced art works have been purchased in the past month than in many years past.

Another reason to believe interest in beauty is being aroused, she added, is that recently many officials in small towns and villages are seeking the advice of architects in beautifying their communities.

Mrs. Roosevelt quoted some letters of appreciation which artists have sent her.

"This interest has broken the walls of our isolation," one of them said. Another wrote:

"The first requirement of the artist who wishes to have a position in the CWA project is that he be a good artist," she declared. We feel that this is most important because the work is to decorate our public buildings and will influence the attitude of the public regarding the fine arts."

"We have divided the whole country into 16 regions. In the key city of each of these regions there is a committee composed of the best artists of that community who judge the work submitted by the applicants. If the work is good and they are in need they are put to work.

"The salaries range from $26.50 for the younger, less experienced artists, to $42.50 for the most experienced ones. We feel this is better because it gives the young artist a chance.

"All the paintings, statues and murals are movable so that they may be carried from one building to another. They deal with educational topics, historical facts, things which are contemporary and instructive as well as beautiful.

"We plan to put 2,500 artists to work in this project. Approximately 1,700 have already begun work. Of that number 15 per cent are women. The first person who began work was a New York woman.

"We have found no hostility to this propect in any part of the country. In fact newspaper clippings and reports show that the public is entirely in favor of it.

"Many of the paintings have already been done. It is of interest as well as a lesson to those people who imagine all American culture centers around the Atlantic Seaboard, that the greatest response so far has been from Texas. Massachusetts is not far behind.

Dr. Rivero to Address Poets' Council Tonight

The Poets' Council will meet at 8:30 o'clock tonight at Alva Belmont House, headquarters of the National Woman's Party. A program of poetry and music will be given. Miss Myrtle R. Patterson will preside.

Dr. Don Pedro Rivero, secretary of the Legacion de Venezuela and a poet of great distinction, who has served as a career diplomat in England, Switzerland, France and Washington, will relate experiences and read some of his poems. Mr. Richard Lorleberg, violin-cellist, will give a musical program.

Silver Slippers.

(Associated Press.)

Women Start National NRA Education Move

Will Teach People All Over Country What Government Is Doing.

A new, detailed organization of women Democrats to teach women of the country what their administration is doing in the way of emergency Governmental organizations was announced yesterday.

As a guest of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at her weekly press conference, Mrs. Mary W. Dewson, director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, told reporters details of the new organization which will include the appointment of seven new regional advisors.

"We believe that a thorough educational program about the New Deal will be of great interest to women of all parties," said Mrs. Dewson. "After this, we will probably discover some Republican women who find that at heart they are really Democrats, when it comes to voting to carry on the administration's policy."

The new advisors are:

Mrs. June Fickel, Hastings, Iowa; Mrs. A. P. Flynn, Logansport, Ind.; Mrs. Harrison Parkman, Emporia, Kans.; Mrs. James Y. Wolfe, Salt Lake City, Utah; Mrs. Elsie Gardner Picking, Toppenish, Wash.; Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, Goldsboro, N. C.; Miss Stella Akin, Savannah, Ga.

Abandoned Fort Serves Birds As Winter Resort in Tropics

Once Formidable Island Off Florida Coast Now an Aviary.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Grim, crumbling Fort Jefferson—ravaged by time and wreckers—soon will receive its annual garrison of thousands of migratory birds.

Like the troops once stationed there, the birds will come from Eastern and Midwestern States, fleeing winter's cold for the subtropical isle.

Far out beyond Key West on the largest of those tiny keys that are the Dry Tortugas, is Fort Jefferson. Covering slightly more than 13 acres and intended to mount 300 guns, it once was the mightiest fort of the lower gulf.

Coast guard air pilots see the birds making the old fort their winter home. Other birds pay long visits twice seasonally as they go to and from the South.

The birds are safe from enemies on the fortified island, the pilots say, because the Government each year sends a guard, who keeps visitors from the island and also observes the habits of the feathered garrison.

At times the six-sided fort and grounds are so covered with birds that the whole island resembles a great white blanket.

Blue—For a Dinner Gown

Skirt of midnight blue chiffon with girdle of diamant laurel leaves. Sleeves are slashed and the long chiffon cuff extends from elbow to wrist. Posed by Miss Kitty Kane.

Peggy Hoyt's Cubbyhole Grew Into a Famous Shop

She Was 17 When She Sought a Job Selling Hats; a Few Years Later She Was Making Hats and Gowns for New York's Exclusive Clientele.

A beautiful gown is the magical power that opens the door for many a young lady, to parties and frolics and romance and good times she simply never could otherwise enjoy.

The greater the dressmaker the greater the magic. And there are a few of the famous designers who, by the influence of the marvelous patterns of frocks they devised, have come to be known as the allies of feminine beauty everywhere.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The door of one of New York's most exclusive millinery shops closed with a soft swish behind a slender, 17-year-old girl with enormous dark eyes. The girl sailed right up to the man who owned the shop and, without so much as a good-morning or a how-do-you-do, said: "I can sell more hats than any girl you have working for you."

The man blinked his eyes and swallowed hard. "Well," he said, which didn't seem to mean anything in particular. As the girl's loveliness registered upon his consciousness he repeated, "Well, Well." Then he said, "And what experience have you had, my dear?"

"None," answered the potential saleswoman. "But I know I can sell hats." The words tumbled over each other as she added: "And every woman that buys a hat from me will come back for more. You just wait and see."

He Could Wait.

The man decided that he could wait two weeks to see this super-saleswoman in action. He told her to come back to the shop in 14 days.

Peggy Hoyt went back. She was given a job, but it was more than a year before she sold a single hat. This wasn't her fault. Her work for that first year consisted in making hats in a stuffy loft. The salary was $7 a week. Now, 14 years later Peggy Hoyt's own hat and gown shop does a business of a million dollars every 12 months.

As she bent over her work table in the uncomfortable loft and moulded stiff buckram and straw with tired hands whose nails were split and broken, Peggy heaved a high now and then for the merry, carefree days she had spent in expensive finishing schools. Her mother did more than heave sighs. She gave a series of high-pressure sales talks on behalf of those schools and their advantages, in a noble but fruitless effort to get Peggy to return to her books.

Stuck to Her Straw.

Peggy stuck by the buckram and straw. She knew what she wanted. She wanted to learn how to make hats and she wanted to sell them. Some day, she told her mother and anybody else that would listen to her, she would have one of the finest shops in New York. In it she would design exquisite gowns and make hats to go with them.

After she had spent a little more than a year in the loft workroom, Peggy managed to get in the salesroom. It was just as she had thought. She could sell hats. She didn't persuade the customers to buy something they didn't want, realizing that that was a short-sighted policy. But she had the ability to take one look at a woman and know immediately the right bonnet to bring out the wearer's best points. Today she sells gowns in the same way that she did hats 14 years ago.

A few days in the salesroom gave Miss Hoyt the idea that she was ready to open her own shop. She didn't stop to think that she was decidedly youthful for such an enterprise. But she did stop to think about the money needed for the venture. A salary of $7 a week is not conducive to a savings account.

Mrs. Hoyt was finally wheedled into loaning her daughter $300. She probably thought of it more as a gift than as a loan. She also arranged for the ambitious youngster to obtain materials on credit from the wholesale houses. With these little details attended to, 18-year-old Peggy went looking for a location.

She rented a cubbyhole in a building on upper Fifth avenue. At that time the smartest and best-dressed women bought their wardrobes in the luxurious stores that lined the avenue! Today they are more likely to spend their money in the exclusive shops tucked away in the side streets. Peggy Hoyt several years ago moved off the avenue to a fashionable side street address.

But at the time she made her debut in the business world, Fifth avenue was "the" shopping center. She was guided in her selection of the cubbyhole by the fact that a very good tailor had a place across the street. This tailor had lived next door to the Hoyts in Brooklyn and had encouraged Peggy in developing what he thought was a talent for art by commissioning her to make him a dozen place cards when she was 12 years old. The money she received for this work was the first she ever earned.

When she opened her tiny millinery shop, the tailor did his best to steer the wives of his customers to her door. Often he took a distinguished woman by the elbow and practically shoved her into the hat shop. She usually lived to thank him for it. Miss Hoyt still has many of those first clients. But even with the tailor's assistance, the little milliner thought that her business needed impetus, and needed it quickly. She knew that before she could hope to be known as an important and authentic designer, she must have wearing her things a few women who were recognized style leaders.

Chose Her Fashion Plate.

When she failed to bring that about, she decided that she would make her own style leader. She selected a young actress who was playing a small part in a musical comedy. Miss Hoyt saw great possibilities in her, both as an actress and as a fashion plate. The young milliner told the musical comedy player that she would provide her with all her hats and gowns, provided she, Miss Hoyt, could have her way in the choice of colors, materials and styles. The actress agreed, as what woman wouldn't?

In the years since Peggy Hoyt started dressing her, the musical comedy "bit" player has risen to stellar roles and is considered one of the best dressed women in America. Meanwhile, she has been an invaluable advertisement for the designer who made her costumes.

After a year in the cubbyhole, the business was successful enough to warrant larger quarters. Miss Hoyt rented a larger room in the same building and hired a girl to help her.

Sat on Each Other's Lap.

By the end of the third year Peggy Hoyt's clients had become so numerous they practically had to sit in each others' laps while they tried on bonnets in the little shop. Plainly still larger quarters were needed. It was then that Miss Hoyt moved from the avenue to an ultra-smart address in the East Fifties. Here she occupies a fine old mansion whose first floor is used for reception room, salon, and fitting-rooms. On the second floor is millinery. The top floors are given over to workrooms and to a lunchroom for the employes, of whom there are several hundred. It was when she moved to these large and sumptuous quarters that Peggy Hoyt began to design dresses. She is now as famous for her gowns as for her hats.

This designer claims that she is entirely independent of Paris. In fact, she proved it a few years ago when she introduced pastel colored frocks at a time when Paris was draping everything and everybody in doleful black. The pastels eventually won out. Miss Hoyt said that she has learned that American women are emancipated from Paris in the matter of style.

Men Best Judges.

They have enough independence of thought nowadays to buy what they want, no matter where they find it. Miss Hoyt also believes that a man is the best judge of what is becoming to a woman, and says that she is guided in designing clothes by her husband's attitude toward the completed creations. The husband is Aubrey Eads and is the Inc. in Peggy Hoyt, Incorporated.

Miss Hoyt was born in Saginaw, Mich., where her father was a prosperous business man. He had his own private little depression when his daughter was 5 years old. Two years later he died, leaving Mrs. Hoyt with the necessity of earning a living for herself and Peggy. The young widow decided that she would be able to do this better in New York than in Saginaw, so she and the little girl came East.

The mother, after weary, hopeless weeks, found a job as comparison shipper for one of the department stores. On her small salary she managed to send Peggy to excellent private schools. Then she became a buyer and Peggy became a milliner and subsequently one of the finest and most original designers in America.

Film Funsters Take Reporter For Nice Ride

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It should have been enough that General Manager John J. Payette, Impresario Guy Wonders and Publicists Frank La Falce and William C. "Bill" Ewing, of the Warner executive offices, all look askance at the suggestion that Bert Wheeler, Bob Woolsey and Dorothy Lee be interviewed briefly backstage Saturday afternoon at the Earle.

However, guided by that sturdy old saw whose coarser teeth have something to do with "where angels fear to tread," we refuse to be deterred.

It should have been a further and final tipoff of what to expect when "Bill" Ewing pushes us eagerly and bravely through the dressing room door ahead of him—like the fellow who is going to "help" you in a fight!

But it is too late then.

Mr. Wheeler, clad pugnaciously in a flannel dressing-gown, is engaged in conversation with a Mr. Parker, an old friend; Mr. Woolsey, all harnessed up in the horse-blanket suit he wears on the stage, reclines on the dressing room chaise longe, his head heavily swathed in a Turkish bath-towel—partly to keep the chill, damp draught off his head, partly to keep his chrome yellow makeup off the pillowcase and partly to see if the warmth will be of any benefit to a raging headache that has settled immediately abaft his horn-rimmed specs.

Our entrance could not possibly have been more opportune!

A Dive Through the Ice!

"Well, boys," we begin blithely, like a newly elected snowbird about to take his first dive through the ice, "how do you like it as far as you've gone?"

"Yeah, that's fine," smiled Mr. Woolsey, wanly, probably not hearing very well through the bath towel, "we're glad to see you, too. Bert, tell him about the time you left us at Cairo and flew to London."

"But I was wondering about your act, isn't this the first time——"

"Yeah. This will kill you," says Mr. Wheeler, ignoring the half-finished question.

Bert Wheeler.

"You see, Woolsey and I made a trip around the world last year and after we'd flown 9,000 miles in 8 days, he and Mrs. Woolsey decided to stop over in Cairo and get rested a little. I'd shipped my baggage all on to London and couldn't do that."

"So we made him stop over anyway," interrupts Mr. Woolsey, "and that night threw a party for him at Shepherd's. His clothes had all gone on ahead, so we hired him some evening duds, but the only shirt we could get had sleeves long enough for Carnera. Every time he tried to reach for a drink, the cuffs shot out and knocked the glass over, and if he let his arms hang down by his side they almost reached the floor—the cuffs, I mean."

"Boy, did that shirt have sleeves!" resumes Mr. Wheeler. "But I must have managed to get some of those drinks, because when I got on the plane next day for Athens, I still had the shirt and the evening clothes on with an empty suitcase in each hand, that you couldn't see for cuffs. Was that a trip! I reached Athens next evening for dinner, spent the night there and the next night I was in London."

"But being here in Washington," we persist, "this is the first time since 'Rio Rita,' isn't it?"

Try and Find Out!

"It certainly is swell to have you here," continues Mr. Wheeler, never minding about the question, "you remind us of so many pleasant things. When we were playing around New York in 'Rio Rita,' Billy Seamon threw a party in his penthouse one night and one of the dames got playful and deliberately poured a highball into the piano. That's the worst way there is to pour a highball into a piano. Instead of getting sore, Billy just got her hat and coat, ushered her politely to the door, and threw her out. I'll never forget——"

"Yeah," chimes in Mr. Woolsey, "and, oh, it must have been six months or so after that that Billy was giving another party and a girl walked up to him and said, 'You don't remember me, do you?' 'No,' says Billy, 'I don't think I do.' 'Why I'm the girl that poured a highball into your piano about six months ago, don't you remember?' "

"Sure, he remembered," speaks up Mr. Wheeler, picking up the story again, "so he goes and gets the gal's hat and coat, ushers her politely to the door and throws her out again, and that was that! Some fun, eh?"

We Get Smart.

"Maybe you'd like to tell us something about your travels," we suggest, purely on a hunch.

Bob Woolsey.

"Yeah, that's what ails us today," says Mr. Wheeler, "we just flew in here from the Coast for this week of personal appearances, the first we've ever made. Oh, we've been in shows together, you understand, but never together in vaudeville or an act like the one we're doing here."

"And are they making us travel today!" quoth Mr. Woolsey, "Five shows a day would set us nuts ordinarily, but this time we like it, because we get a chance to try out new gags and comedy bits—put three new ones in at the last show and are going to try two more this next one."

"How long were you on that trip around the world?" we inquire, flushed at the success of our ruse.

"Three weeks is all we're doing this time," confides Mr. Wheeler "This is the first. We go from here right into New York for the Hinds broadcast Sunday night, the twenty-first. That's what we really came East for. We'll rehearse Friday and Saturday, broadcast Sunday and then come back to Baltimore to play the Century for a week. That's as far as we're definitely booked, but there'll probably be one more week after that."

"Did you take a camera along and make pictures, while you were touring the Orient?" we asked.

Two Films in Sight.

"Do we make pictures!" Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Woolsey are both talking at once now. "Wait 'til you see 'Hips, Hips, Hooray!' Best thing we've done since 'Cuckoos.' As soon as we get through with these three weeks, we go right back to RKO-Radio and start another feature that's on this year's contract. It will be called 'Frat Heads' and has to do with college fraternities—looks good."

"Was Dorothy Lee on that trip around the world with you?"

"Sure she's in all our pictures," speaks up Mr. Wheeler, "and is here playing with us now. She's in 'Hips, Hips, Hooray' and will be in 'Frat Heads.' Go get her, somebody, and let her get in on this."

"The guy's nuts!" observes Mr. Woolsey, softly, through the folds of his towel. "Certainly Dorothy was not on that trip around the world with us. The report that she and Bert were going to be married started right here in Washington last summer, when Bert was here visiting at the home of Mr. Parker. The leader of the band at the Shoreham saw Bert dancing with Mr. Parker's sister, thought it was Dorothy Lee, whispered the news to a newspaper friend, the newspaper guy told it to a reporter, the reporter—but you know more about such things than we do. Anyhow, it wasn't Dorothy, at all."

Enter Miss Lee!

"Who speaks my name?" yawns Miss Lee, appearing in the doorway as if it had been rehearsed. "Oh, hello. Sure, I know the Warings. So Fred and Tom are friends of yours, too. Well, well, it's a big world after all—or something. And am I tired! Who started this business of getting up at 8 in the morning to meet trains bearing sisters-in-law and everything? Nobody I know ever gets up at 8. A nap is what I need. What have I been doing since the last show? How can you sleep around this madhouse with Wheeler and Woolsey popping in every minute or two to feed you a new gag for the act, or Phil Lampkin busting in from the Fox just because we used to work together out on the Coast, or Leo Fitzgerald, the agent, dropping by to find out how I'm resting and how do I feel, and this Audrey Sieber putting on a class in tap dancing out in the hall? So you liked me in 'Take a Chance,' eh? That's swell. But what I need right now is a nap—or maybe a cup of coffee. Anybody got a cup of coffee? Well, can anybody get a cup of coffee? But what I'd rather have is a nap. The idea of routing anybody out at 8 o'clock! That isn't even the middle of the night yet. What is this business, Woolsey, I say, 'I'm just 16 and a little shy' and then what do you say? I hear Fred Waring has a nice contract with Ford, Mr.—Mr.—say, what is your name, anyhow?"

Dorothy Lee.

"Oh, so you won't talk, eh?" we crack, gradually getting the drift of this ignoring questions business. "Well, sister, that's just too bad. If you won't talk, we can't quote you in the paper. Sorry. We'll be seeing you around, I'm afraid."

And so out into the cool, refreshing drizzle of E street.

The easiest people in the world to interview this Bert Wheeler, Bob Woolsey and Dorothy Lee. They answer everything you ask them—and what answers!

In their simple and happy lives an answer is an answer and that's that, so what the heck—which is a convenient and seldom-used slang word meaning hell!

If from the above only partially slanderous report one is unable to catch a complete mental picture of Wheeler and Woolsey and Miss Lee, he should know, then, that they are genial, amusing, wholesome folks, wholly devoid of pose and apparently living life solely for the fun they can get out of it by creating fun for others. They are exactly as you have seen them on the screen and as they appear in their informal and largely impromptu act—which they wrote and put together themselves, incidentally—at the Earle this week, except that none of them is as tall as you might have guessed. Bert Wheeler is a little darker, a little heavier and a little more explosive than Bob Woolsey the sophisticated weisenheimer to Wheeler's gullible "sap." Miss Lee is a dark-eyed and vivacious youngster who knows her way around and is always ready for a laugh—even when she has been aroused as early as 8 in the morning. So now you know.

One of the Eight.

Betty Gray, the attractive blonde Washingtonian who earned a place in the cast of Paramount's production of "Eight Girls in a Boat" by winning a contest conducted jointly last summer by The Post, Loew's Fox Theater and the Wilson Line, will appear in person on the stage of Loew's Fox, beginning next Friday, in conjunction with the showing of the picture for the first time in the Capital.

Miss Gray was declared winner of the Washington contest—similar contests were conducted in seven other cities—and introduced from the stage of the Fox last summer and shortly thereafter left for Hollywood to appear in the film.

A skit now is being prepared for her in which she will relate some of the Cinderella experiences that she enjoyed during the production of "Eight Girls in a Boat."

It is probable that she will appear on the stage with Charles "Buddy" Rogers, who will headline the vaudeville bill at Loew's Fox next week.

A brief bulletin from Miss Betty Smythe, representing the Theater Guild briefly in Washington, advises that the rhymed version of Moliere's "School for Husbands" will not be presented in the Capital, as has been previously announced. The New York Theater Guild's next production to be seen in this city will be "They Shall Not Die," a play by John Wexley, which will be interpreted by a distinguished cast that includes Ruth Gordon, Claude Rains—recently of "Invisible Man" fame—Linda Watkins and 55 others. The date on which "They Shall Not Die" is scheduled to play the National Theater is now penciled in as February 19.

Where They Are.

For those who care to keep track, Miss Ina Claire, opening in S. N. Behrman's "Biography" at the National tomorrow night, arrived in town yesterday afternoon and is stopping at the Shoreham. Max Baer, a hit at the Fox last week, is playing Brooklyn this week. Wheeler and Woolsey are at the Mayflower. Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are playing the New York Paramount.

Anticlimax.

Gayety

Only once, during the entire presentation does one receive an honest laugh, and that while Monte and Nancy Bohn cavort around in a well rehearsed and truly funny "Boxing Scene." Miss Bohn steals some "Handsome" Jim Londos' thunder when, in conclusion, she swings her partner into a furious airplane spin. Their bit called for a curtain speech, surprisingly well done.

George Murray and Mickey Markwood are only fair comics. Their scenes are lacking in speed and the black-outs end upon empty "gags." The hard work of Mervin Harmon and Floyd Hallesey adds but little in the way of amusement.

The feminine portion of the attraction is headed by Joyce La Rue, whose voice is heard to advantage but who is inadequate as a display artiste. Ann Mitchell, Wanda Casino, Betty Joyce and the Carroll Sisters are short of the standards of the better burlesque stars.

Col. Jimmy Lake has bettered this one time and again in his own "stock."

Young Artiste on the Piano Not Artiste on Piano!

On the contrary, ladies and gentlemen, this is Miss Ann Sothern, a newcomer to leading screen roles, who will be seen with Edmund Lowe in "Let's Fall in Love," opening soon at RKO-Keith's. Miss Sothern—whose real name is Betty Ann Jenks—encountered some difficulty in hitting upon a satisfactory stage name, having been known first as "Mary Mason," and "Mary Marlowe" having been under consideration before Director Harry Joe Brown, by a quick association of ideas, named her Ann Sothern.

Senate Group Ready to Sift Pay Cut Bill

Glass Committee Will Start Analysis Tomorrow.

Fight Certain on Floor; Expect President's Will to Prevail.

Consideration of the independent offices appropriation bill, carrying pay-cut and economy legislation, will be begun tomorrow morning by an appropriations subcommittee headed by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

Advocates of restoration of salaries to statutory levels and those wishing repeal of the economy law provisions will seek to make the committee consideration another battleground and have asked the committee to hold hearings on the question.

Decision on that question will be made when the committee meets, Senator Glass said.

Whatever is done in committee, the fight will be taken to the Senate floor. Despite the widespread sentiment in favor of restoring salaries to normal, the recommendation of the President is expected by Senate leaders to prevail.

The President included in his budget message the recommendations of Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget, that only 5 of the 15 per cent cut be restored in the next fiscal year.

Influence of the President is likely to be sufficient to rally a majority behind his recommendation. Proof of the power of the Chief Executive was given in the House which passed the bill under one of the most stringent and broad gag rules ever adopted by that body. Administration leaders held a majority of five votes.

Indicative of the estimate of their strength by advocates of pay restoration is the willingness of Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, to accept a compromise before the battle begins in the Senate. Urging return of the full 15 per cent, Senator Thomas is willing to compromise on 10 per cent.

Republicans will seek to upset the President's recommendation on the ground that it is not in harmony with the program to raise prices and increase purchasing power. Senator Arthur Robinson (Republican), Indiana, said the proposal to continue pay reductions in the next fiscal year was cruel and unjustified in view of the "reckless" expenditures made and contemplated by the Administration.

Senator Charles L. McNary, Oregon, Republican leader, said he favored pay restoration and wouldn't be surprised to see it accomplished.

Adult Teaching Plans Pushed

Webster Building May Be Used for Illiterates; Call Made for Teachers.

Webster School at Tenth and H streets northwest is being considered by the Board of Education for use as Washington's first school for illiterate adults.

The school, now used by Americanization students whose classes are held mostly at night, is believed to offer daytime facilities ample to care for pupils of the new school.

Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, first assistant superintendent of schools, has ssued a call for teachers and about four will be selected. Their first duties will be to canvass the city for students and arrange classes.

Each teacher will hold two classes, morning and afternoon, at the convenience of students and teachers.

Welles Confirmed Without Debate

Borah Steps Aside After Early Senate Delay.

Consideration of the appointment had been held up at the request of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, but he notified the Senate at the outset yesterday that he had no desire to postpone action any longer.

Borah said he had requested postponement for persons outside of Congress but had no information himself which would necessitate debating the nomination.

Woman Found in Coma In Gas-Filled Kitchen

Mrs. Aleen Lambert, 38, of 1737 Connecticut avenue northwest, was found unconscious beside a stove in the gas-filled kitchen of her apartment yesterday by Mrs. Earl Clyde, of 1712 Seventeenth street northwest, a friend.

At Emergency Hospital officials said she would recover.

Slayer's Conviction Affirmed.

The District Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the conviction of Ernest H. Bolden, colored, who was tried in District Supreme Court for murder of his wife, Elsie, 1218 Thirty-seventh street northwest. Bolden also killed his wife's mother, Janie Plummer.

First Aid Course Is Started for CWA Workers

A campaign to promote "safety consciousness" as an antidote to carelessness among Washington's CWA workers was inaugurated yesterday by the District chapter of the Red Cross when it began classes in first aid at its headquarters, 1730 E street northwest.

Two classes of workers reported. Each group consisted of 25 men. The first was under Capt. Richard Boss, of the District Fire Department, and the second under H. L. Leonard, safety engineer of the Washington Gas Light Co.

The men will study for five days, with their courses divided each day into the following phases of first aid: (1) How to prevent excessive bleeding; (2) proper care of all types of wounds; (3) how to treat shock; (4) artificial respiration, and (5) transportation of the injured.

When the course is completed, another group of 50 will be similarly instructed.

They'll Become Teachers.

According to Lieut. R. E. York, in charge of CWA safety here, one man in 50 engaged in CWA enterprises is to be made "safety conscious."

His knowledge will be imparted to his fellow workers. The Red Cross instruction is under direction of Ira Lee Law, Red Cross safety director here.

Most of yesterday's students were timekeepers, employed on various Federal projects, such as those under way at the Naval Observatory and the Army War College.

Potter's Field Claims Baby, Mother Fled

The body of "John Doe Brice," 3-months'-old foundling, deserted by his mother Christmas Eve as he lay ill in a room at a downtown hotel, last night rested in a grave in potter's field.

The child had been treated at Gallinger Hospital, but he died more than a week ago of bronchial pneumonia. His mother had registered as "Mrs. Jack Brice, of Macon, N. C."

One-Way on 13th Effective Today

Rush-Hour Regulations to Include Parking Ban.

Thirteenth street northwest will become a one-way thoroughfare during morning and afternoon rush hours this morning at 8 o'clock.

Only southbound traffic will be permitted between Kansas and Massachusetts avenues from 8 to 9:30 a. m. From 4 to 6 p. m., only northbound traffic will flow. No parking on either side of the street will be allowed during the one-way hours.

Signs have been erected indicating the direction of traffic and hours of one-way driving and police will be on hand to enforce the regulations. Reaction of motorists and a study of the system will be made by traffic officials during the first few days of operation.

Indicted in Shooting.

Alpha Tau Omega Dinner.

The Alpha Tau Omega Alumni Association, of Washington, will have a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Saturday at the University Club. All fraternity members who are in the District are invited.

Retired Army Officer Dies.

Notification of the death of Maj. Benton G. Shoemaker, U. S. A., retired, 48, at Clarksville, Tenn., was received yesterday by the War Department. Maj. Shoemaker was retired for disability in line of duty in February, 1932. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Bettie G. Fletcher, of Clarksville.

Thomas Report Absolves Fire Chief Watson

New Punishment System Is Recommended to Commissioners.

A report recommending a more liberal system of meting out punishments in the Fire Department, but absolving Fire Chief George S. Watson of the general charges of harshness in dealing with firemen, was submitted to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday by Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel.

Thomas recommended that a punishment code be drafted for the department and thamt a grievance committee be authorized to meet monthly with department officials with the aim of eliminating difficulties between privates and officers.

The report also proposed that the former practice of imposing extra hours of duty on offenders on rules or deportment be restored. After going unchallenged for 25 years, the practice was suddenly dropped recently after Corporation Counsel William W. Bride ruled it illegal under the District Code.

This is the second time that the report has been forwarded to the Commissoiners by the assistant corporation counsel designated to investigate charges aganist Watson by Paul E. Jamieson, attorney for the City Fire Fighters Association.

When Jamieson was asked to submit more specific charges and instances in support of his complaint, the report was returned to Thomas. Jamieson, however, refused to submit the additional data and declined to attend a conference with the District heads.

Old-Age Relief Urged at Joint C. of C. Session

Unanimous indorsement of the Black-Copeland bill providing old-age security in the District of Columbia was voted yesterday by the charities and membership committees of the Washington Chamber of Commerce in joint luncheon session yesterday.

Twenty-six States have enacted old age pension laws, declared Elwood Street, Community Chest director, at the meeting, in pointing out that the District is lagging in provision for old age security.

While a pension system might increase total expenditures, Street said, there would be economic and social savings of great benefit to the community. He discussed the poorhouse problem and stressed social values to be realized by maintaining personal economic autonomy wherever possible.

David Ruml, director of the District Employment Center, declared 400 aged persons registered with his agency could not be given jobs under CWA because specifications called for younger men. The 400 are consequently on relief rolls, he said.

Col. Edward Goring Bliss, chairman of the charities committee, presided over the session and outlined provisions of the proposed legislation for old age security.

El Dorado, Ark., Jan. 15 (AP).—Two-year-old Jack Newsom swallowed a nickel he was playing with last night. Physicians were consulted and an examination was postponed until today.

Fox Hunter Killed Under Car Being Pulled From Mudhole

Falling under his automobile as a team of horses extricated it from a mud hole, J. Charles Higgins, 79, Beltsville, Md., yesterday was crushed to death beneath the low-lying chasis. The accident occurred on Ammendale road near the Higgins farm.

He walked to his farm after the car stuck and brought back Clarence Adams, colored helper, and two horses. Two other men, Fred G. Hank and Fred Hollidge, who happened along, also helped.

The car was being drawn out when one horse became excited. Mr. Higgins shouted to them. They dashed forward. Grabbing for the reins, Mr. Higgins slipped beneath the front wheels of the car. The moving car then rolled him along between the ground and the chasis, for several yards.

Fifty yards away the car was stopped as the bumper caught against a fence post. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Oscar Lavine.

Mrs. Higgins, the only survivor, was located at the Y. W. C. A. here.

Court Backs Realty Trade 'Cheat' Award

Broker and Firm Again Ordered to Pay $25,000.

Holding that Mrs. Louise T. Chambers was "cheated to the extent of approximately $25,000," the District Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed a decision of the District Supreme Court awarding her damages against William A. Hill and William A. Hill Co., Inc.

Mrs. Chambers, the court said, exchanged property located at 2009 Massachusetts avenue, which was encumbered with a $40,000 mortgage, for an equity in 1626-32 U street northwest.

William G. Lipscomb, who acted as her agent and who proposed the exchange, also acted as agent for the defendants and secured a commission of $1,500 from each party.

Demands Adjustment.

One week after the transfer, the Massachusetts avenue property was sold for $25,000 over and above the mortgage, while Mrs. Chambers "soon learned that the property she had got in the exchange was worth little, if any, more than the amount of the mortgage on it." After holding her property some time, Mrs. Chambers tendered it back to the defendants and "demanded they restore the status quo."

The lower court found that "Lipscomb did not disclose to the plaintiff that he was receiving a commission from Hill & Co. at the time of the transaction, nor did he later disclose that fact to her; that whether or not there was any express agreement that Hill would also pay Lipscomb a commission for making the exchange of the properties, there was undoubtedly an understanding between them that this would be done.

"Hill & Co. knew that Lipscomb was acting for Mrs. Chambers, and, having secretly purchased the services of the agent of Mrs. Chambers, were responsible to her for his representations; that he knowingly misrepresented to her the respective values of the two properties."

Connivance Apparent.

Concluding, the court declared "the facts in the present case show just as clearly as in any of the cases cited, the wrong of the agent, the connivance of the beneficiary, and the loss to the victim. The rule that in such circumstances the beneficiary should be required to disgorge is therefore applicable."

The court indicated that because of a stipulation between counsel, the amount of damages should be set at $22,500. Attorney W. Gwynn Gardiner represented Mrs. Chambers, while Austin F. Canfield acted for Hill & Co.

Bridge Design Awaits Action Of Arts Group

Supply Building Addition and Mall Cross Axis Also Pending.

Selection of the design for the new high level bridge at Little Falls, replacing Chain Bridge, is among projects which will be taken up by the Fine Arts Commission at its meeting next Thursday and Friday.

Location of the Potomac River span at Little Falls, connecting with the proposed Marva highway and George Washington Memorial Parkway, recently was recommended to District Commissioners by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The arts group, of which Dr. Charles Moore is chairman, also will consider sketches for the enlargement of the General Supply committee, building a public works project which will make the structure a combined Government warehouse and office building housing 400 to 500 employes. It is located at Ninth and D streets southwest.

A design for landscaping and developing the cross axis of the Mall between Seventh and Ninth streets will be discussed. Other business will include studies on development of the Agriculture Department's Experimental Farm at Beltsville, Md., and new buildings to be built at Howard University with public works funds.

The future Federal building program, in which President Roosevelt has shown deep interest, will be considered Thursday afternoon at a joint meeting with the Planning Commission and the Treasury Board of Architectural Consultants. Included in the agenda for this conference are the Great Plaza opposite the Commerce Building, extension of the Internal Revenue Building, which has been authorized, and proposed new homes for the Army and Navy Departments.

Both commissions also will confer on the widening of F street between Seventh and Ninth and the development of Columbia Island Plaza, which recently was staked off.

Dr. Walter W. Marr to Speak.

Dr. Walter W. Marr, dental officer of Mount Alto Hospital, will address the District Dental Assistants Society at the Ambassador Hotel at 9 p. m. tomorrow on "Efficient Assistants."

Attorney General Witness in Duke Case

Stand Taken By Cummings In Duke Trial

15 Minutes of Questioning Fails to Produce Testimony.

Sought by Attorney Jesse C. Duke as a witness for three days, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday spent 15 minutes on the stand in the District Supreme Court and left without giving a bit of testimony.

Duke, on trial in a disbarment case, fired a volley of queries at the Attorney General, and upon objection by Lucian Vandoren, of the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association, all were ruled out.

When Mr. Cummings left the witness chair he had merely identified himself and his position, and had stated that he had no present recollection concerning the case.

Immediately following, Duke placed Reynolds Robertson, clerk of the United States Supreme Court, on the stand to identify papers filed in that court. After that Duke rested his case and arguments were begun.

Vandoren, for the prosecution, and Waldo G. Morse, a member of Duke's defense staff, finished their arguments. Others plan to conclude their remarks today, thus bringing to an end a four-weeks trial.

Mrs. Townsend, police reported, was on the sidewalk when the machine of Walter Beard, 3220 Twelfth street northwest, jumped the curb and hit her. Before striking her, witnesses said, Beard's car collided with an automobile driven by Clarence Ross, of Takoma Park. Both Beard and Ross were held.

$3,000,000 Gas Going Concern Value Attacked

Washington, Georgetown Light Firms Estimate Ruling Delayed.

A fight against inclusion of a $3,000,000 estimate for going concern value in the valuation of the Washington & Georgetown Gas Light Companies was indicated yesterday after a day of testimony in support of the estimate by Luther K. Nash, vice president of Stone & Webster, at a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

William A. oRberts, special counsel of the commission, moved to strike all testimony from the records. He was joined by People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech. The commission reserved decision.

Roberts insisted that the final figure was but a summation of reproduction cost rather than a record of value.

Keech stated the going concern value would make the public an insurer of a fair return to the gas company.

After spending the day building up his case for a going concern value of $3,684,460 for both companies, Nash allowed for unnamed nonessentials and gave as his judgment a value of $3,000,000, of which $500,000 would be for the Georgetown company.

Nash's figure comprised five factors: Cost of securing customers and promoting business, $1,700,000; cost of training personnel, $85,847; cost of establishing records, $183,800; cost of coordinating plant facilities for producing gas, $210,718, and carrying charges on unused equipment initial years of operation.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utility committee of the Federation of Citizens Association, called on gas company officials to produce a record of all gas main breaks and leaks over the last five years. He explained he wished to use it when the hearing enters the depreciation phase.

Peacock summoned police, who took West to a physican, who pronounced the man dead of a heart attack.

Battle Hints He'll Oppose Airport Aid

Hearing Opens Today on McSwain Bill for Modern Field.

Recommendation against immediate allotment of PWA funds for acquisition of the Washington Airport site will be made today to the central PWA board, Turner Battle, Assistant Secretary of Labor and chairman of the PWA subcommittee on Federal projects, indicated yesterday.

As Battle's report goes to the PWA board, the House Military Affairs Committee will begin hearings today on the McSwain bill, sponsored by its chairman, to provide a suitable airport for the Capital.

A host of witnesses have been called by the military affairs group, including representatives of Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce, airport officials, Army engineers and the Quartermaster General's division of the Army.

Price Called Too High.

Battle said yesterday that the price asked for the Washington Airport is too high, adding that he considered the airport project meritorious. He admitted the present field is "actually dangerous" and does not compare with airports in many cities of only 50,000 population.

Report of Mr. Battle will be submitted to the main PWA board today. If accepted, denial of the funds is expected to be made known immediately. If he is reversed, it is not believed announcement will be made for some time.

Dwindling of the $3,300,000,000 PWA fund was given as another reason for unfavorable recommendation on the Washington airport.

Bill Asks Modern Port.

The McSwain bill would provide for the closing of Military Road and the contsrution of an airfield of up-to-date proportions and equipment suitable for an aviation hub commensurate with the Capital of the Nation.

Among those who are expected to appear at the hearing will be Samuel Solomon, general manager of the Washington Airport and vice president of the National Airport Corporation, which operates the field; Maj. J. D. Arthur, jr., Army engineer for the local district; Maj. Merrill D. Wheeler, Quartermaster General's Department; Maj. K. A. Ryerson, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industries; Roy S. Braden, county manager of the Arlington County Commissioners; L. M. Kelley, chairman of the county board; Capt. Arthur B. Cook, representing the Navy; Arne B. Cammerer, director of Parks, Buildings and Reservations, and T. S. Settle, secretary of the National Park and Planning committee.

"Three Red Heads" Indicted in Thefts

O'Neal Brothers Charged With 2 Robberies.

The accusations against them are that on last December 17 they robbed a gasoline filling station at 2618 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, of $23, and later the same day held up the proprietor of a lunchroom at 1490 H street northeast and took $39.

Ruth Takes $17,000 Salary Cut With Grin as He Signs 1934 Contract

Talk of Job As Manager Hushed

Clicking of Cameras Records Start of 15th Year as Yankee.

The 40-year-old slugger of the New York Yankees signed a one-year player contract in the brewery offices of his employer, Col. Jacob Ruppert, who confirmed the fact it calls for $35,000 for 1934 and made it equally clear he has no understanding with Ruth about the future possibilities of managing the team.

"We have a manager for the Yankees—Joe McCarthy—for this year and next," said Col. Ruppert, with considerable emphasis. "He is in complete charge and I am satisfied to have him in the job. That's why I gave him a long-term contract.

No Talk of Future.

"I have no understanding of any kind with Ruth about the future. That will have to take care of itself. His contract this year, which is agreeable to both of us, is as a player. He tells me he is in better shape than last season and that he hopes to play at least 100 games. I hope he does and I hope he hits a lot of home runs."

At the same time, Col. Ruppert disclosed he met the Babe's terms in order to avoid any extended argument, raising the "ante" by $10,000 in a conference last Friday that lasted less than 5 minutes.

"Ruth asked me what I was willing to offer and I said $25,000," explained Col. Ruppert. "He replied he didn't want to sign for less than $35,000. I said 'wil you sign for $35,000?' He replied he would so and I said 'then it's settled. I'll pay you that for this year.'"

Last year the colonel was not so willing to meet the Babe's demands. The Yankee owner offered the slugger a $50,000 contract, representing a cut of $25,000. Ruth countered with a demand for $65,000, gradually pared this down and finally signed for $52,000 after the longest holdout siege of his career.

Peace and Quiet for Ruppert.

"Now I will be able to go South this spring in peace and quiet," smiled Col. Ruppert after he and Ruth had gone through the formal ceremony of signing the contract a dozen times for the benefit of still and movie cameras.

Today's was the eighth contract Ruth has signed with the Yankees. This will be his fifteenth year with the New York club and his twenty-first year in the American League. Including this year's figure, his aggregate salary with the Yankees amounts to $842,000. He told Col. Ruppert he hoped he would be with the club at least long enought to make it an "even million."

Ruth held up the entire proceedings for a half hour by failing to arrive on scheduled time at the brewery. Just when everybody was getting figety waiting for the star performer to appear and do his stuff, the telephone jingled. The Babe was on the other end, opologizing for being late. He had been on a hunting trip.

"Say," he bellowed, "tell the colonel I'm bringing along a pheasant and a rabbit for him."

Gaithersburg Girls Tie With Mt. Rainier

The Mount Rainier High School girls' basket ball team yesterday battled the Gaithersburg High girls to a 23-23 tie in a game played at Mount Rainier. The home team led, 15-12, at the half, but quickly relinquished the lead to Gaithersburg, whom they trailed, 23-21, going into the last few seconds of play. Grace Click, Mount Rainier right forward, clicked off a field goal just ahead of the final whistle to make the game a dead loss, so far as deciding supremacy is concerned.

Yale Head Approves "Outsider" as Coach

New York, Jan. 15 (AP). — Yale alumni leaders asserted today that they have assurances Dr. James Rowland Angell, president of the university, realizes Eli sentiment, in and out of New Haven, now is overwhelmingly against retention of the graduate football coaching system.

This was considered another step toward the achievement of the "old grad" objective—the engagement of an outsider of proved ability as the new head coach for 1934. The name of Harry G. Kipke, of Michigan, has been most prominently mentioned so far.

Cubs Sign English.

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Woody English, captain and third baseman of the Chicago Cubs, signed with President William Walker today and thus became the sixth Bruin to enter the 1934 fold. Contracts were mailed to all other players today.

New York (AP).—Carl Hubbell, ace Giant southpaw, who received $12,000 for last season's labors, is believed to have received a boost of $3,000 on his 1934 contract.

Mr. Baer and the Cuties

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (Spl.).—This department, as usual, is way out on a limb. Ever since Primo Carnera won the heavyweight championship of the world, and when it looked as though he might never meet Max Baer in defense of the title, I have been predicting that Baer would knock him out if and when they meet. With Dempsey on one side and the Garden on the other it looked like a pretty safe prediction. Also I figured that even if they did get together, Carnera's management never would consent to his fighting Baer without some suitable business transaction involved, one that Baer might find it impossible to fulfill. Of course, that is the ideal way to make predictions—look for something that will never take place. A good deal of my success is based on that system. You remember I predicted that Jack Dempsey would have stopped John L. Sullivan in five rounds if they had ever met.

Now, the two men are on the verge of signing to prize fight with one another publicly next June, which puts me in a most peculiar position. I said that Baer would knock Carnera out and I've got to see it through.

If you could see my hero at this moment dipping his dainty fingers in the rouge pot in his dressing room at the vaudeville house where he is now performing, penciling his eyebrows, tinting his long curling lashes with mascara, and dusting his pan with scented talcum powder you would understand why I am inclined to fret a little over my selection. I do like to bring them home in the important ones like heavyweight championships, world series and Rose Bowl games. Ahem, bragging again.

There is something subversive about the atmosphere of the theater or the night club, places where cuties wander about in shifts (the archaic meaning), that is not exactly the best thing in the world for prize fighters! Baer may be the exception and if so we can only doff our kellys and murmur enviously and admiringly, "What a man, what a man." I wish that my natural modesty as well as the post-office regulations permitted me to detail and expand upon some of the miracles attributed to Baer, and in most cases founded upon fact, while he was training for Schmeling. His bouts with Cupid during his periods of relaxation when he is not in training have already become legend. It is a poor day when Baer does not become engaged.

I will remember the Elysian days when Baer was around town shortly before his prize fight with Max Schmeling and squiring Mlle. June Knight around the village. Max and June were in love. They both lived at the Park Central. June with her mamma and Max with his manager, Ancil Hoffman. Both a stage manager and a prize fight manager have difficult jobs.

A curious coincidence, my telephone rang while I was preparing this admonitory opus and it was Joe Rivkin of Leo Morrison's office, the theatrical agents. Joe said he was booking Baer, and said, "What do you think, has he got a chance to beat Carnera?"

I made a suitable reply which I will not print, but it had to do with Baer's love of the ladies, and that he could not be expected to win the heavyweight championship and continue his present career as Don Juan to the members of the ensemble. Mr. Rivkin said, "I wish somebody would write a good strong editorial, bawling him out on account of that. We are trying to do everything we can, but he is a very headstrong man, and the ladies are very fond of him."

I replied, "Mr. Rivkin, what is the matter with Baer never has been solved by writing editorials, to my memory, but I will do my best, because I have picked the fellow to win the Carnera fight and would certainly like to see him pick out some nice monastery and start light training."

I have the feeling that this business with Carnera will be a very rough brawl while it lasts and comparable to the Dempsey-Firpo pillow fight if my man will forego the pleasures of the flesh and settle down to hardening his thorax, pickling his chin and practicing up his Sunday punch, the one he hit Herr Schmeling alongside the head with, causing him to come all undone at the seams.

We are all anxious to see that same smack applied to Carnera's chin with all the vim and vitality of which Baeer is capable of applying. If Carnera does what I think he will do, Master Baer may then, for all I care, return to the cult of the little winged one, because I will be all square. If Carnera should stand up, why Maxie can likewise return to such charming pursuits, though I suspect the return may be made on a shutter.

Creavy Takes $4,000 Golf On Coast

Defeats Thomson, 3 and 2, in 36-Hole Final at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15 (AP). Tom Creavy, Albany, N. Y., professional, won the fourth annual San Francisco National match play open championship today when he defeated Jim Thomson, Long Beach, Calif., 3 and 2, in the 36-hole finals.

Thomson put on a great up-hill battle to even the match at one time, after Creavy had won the first five holes of the morning round to pile up a commanding lead. Each turned in sub-par golf. Creavy had an approximate 69 to Thomson's 70 in the morning.

During the afternoon play Creavy was approximately two strokes under par while Thomson was one over. They picked up on the twenty-eighth hole after Thomson had conceded it to his opponent.

Creavy received $811 as the winner's share of the $4,000 prize money. Thomson's share as runner up was $535.

Maryland Frosh Defeat Roosevelt

Waters Is Star as School Five Bows, 47 to 17.

The Maryland Frosh defeated Roosevelt High School at College Park yesterday, 47-17.

Led by Al Waters, former Eastern High star, who tallied 16 points, the Maryland yearlings got off to an early lead that stood at 13-2 at the quarter. At half-time the breach was widened 26-11 by the stellar shooting of Willison and Keller, center and guard, respectively, of the collegians.

G.U. Preps Swamp Landon Five 38-16

Egan, With 12 Points Is High Scorer of Game.

Joe Egan, with 12 points, was the big shot in the Georgetown Prep victory of Landon Prep School yesterday at Garrett Park. The Hoyettes won by the impressive score of 38-16.

After sparring about the floor for the first three minutes of play, Liezear, former Bethesda-Chevy Chase luminary and now star forward with Landon, whipped the ball through the hoop for the opening score. Egan quickly tied it up and then followed a run of points by the Garrett Parkers which brought the score to 14-4 at the quarter. The half ended 22-10. Slaughter showed up best for Landon.

Rawson Subs For Petrin Tonight

Fidducia Fights Irving and Walter Kirkwood Opposes Hyde.

DON PETRIN, Jersey City heavyweight, will not be on hand to swap punches with Les Kennedy at Portner's tonight. His place on the fistic firing line will be taken by one Larry "Big Boy" Rawson, another of the big brigade from the same suburb of Manhattan Transfer.

All of which may or may not be a good thing for Kennedy, who has encountered uniformly difficult opposition in each of his fights at the Alexandria abattoir. Little is known of the caliber of opposition to be offered him tonight but the Portner received glowing accounts of Rawson's capabilities from his manager, who also manages Petrin.

Has Injured Ankle.

"Petrin injured ankle in training. Unable to box but okay for a week later," read the sad news from Petrin's manager. "Have a good substitute in Larry "Big Boy" Lawson, who has defeated Braddock, Belanger, Ace Clark, Simms and Ad Warren." Take it or leave it. The Portner's promoters have taken it. But can Rawson?

Kennedy tapered off a heavy training schedule yesterday with a light workout on the fast bag. He appeared in the best of condition and is confident that the long voluntary layoff he took has removed every vestige of the "staleness" which has been blamed for his recent bad showings in and around New York.

Fidducia Imported.

Freddy Fidducia, one of Max Waxman's better prospects, is being especially imported to test the ability of the greatly improved Henry Irving in a six-round semi-final. Irving has recently absorbed a rather sound knowledge of the fundamentals of boxing which, added to his ever-present, potent right-hand punching, makes him a very formidable opponent for any light heavyweight.

The Northeast noggin-knocker has also shown an encouraging willingness to train faithfully for his last few fights and he may stop the highly touted Waxman protege in short order.

Hyde Meets Kirkwood.

Carl Hyde, another Waxman charge, is scheduled to meet Walter Kirkwood in the main preliminary of six rounds. While under the management of Waxman rumor has it that Hyde is the fistic apple of the eye of one Walter Chrysler, the automobile magnate. Kirkwood also has shown great improvement in his last fight or two and it behooves the fistic apple of Mr. Chrysler's eye to have his free-wheeling and chassis in perfect working order lest he develop knocks—from the glove-encased fists of Kirkwood.

In a duo of four-rounders Sammy Romano, club-fighter par excellence, will try to punch his way through Harry Jeffrys, one of Baltimore's best prospects, and Baby Charles will tackle Tony Kessel, who also comes from Baltimore.

Malcewicz Seen As Test for Steele

Mat Vet Brings 5 Records Here Thursday.

A distinct departure from the general run of old-timers, cat-like Joe Malcewicz, Utica's rassling star, Thursday night makes an auspicious debut at the Auditorium. He is scheduled to buck Ray Steele in the main preliminary to a double wind-up scheduling Count Zarynoff vs. Fred Grobmier and Vanka elesniak vs. Ernie Dusek.

Though defeated recently byy Jim Browning, Steele remains an outstanding title menace. Prior to bowing to big Jim after a furious session, Crown Prince Ray had upset two of the foremost championship contenders in Strangler Lewis and John Pesek, while he held title claimant Jim Londos to a two-hour draw here last summer.

Daily Double Nets $2,642 for Writer

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Spearman Lewis, former Paris correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, realized a long-cherished ambition here this afternoon. Lewis held the only winning ticket sold on the winning daily double combination of Albuquerque, in the first race, and Fervid, in the third event, two long shots that made the grade. His $2 ticket was good for exactly $2,642.40.

Lewis bought three daily double tickets, all starting with Albuquerque. One was on Fervid; another was on Premeditate, which ran second to Fervid, and the other on Calgary Kay, which wound up eighth.

G. U., West Va. Fives Play Navy This Week

Annauolis, Md., Jan. 15 (Spl.). Setback by Duke on Saturday, the Navy basket ball squad today resumed practice sessions for what probably will be the hardest week of the season, save perhaps the final roundup for the Army Cadets late in February.

Georgetown, an old rival, will be met Wednesday, and the West Virginia University quintet will visit here Saturday. The Hilltoppers have been exhibiting a fine brand of the game, while the Mountaineers sport a victory over Maryland, sonquerors of Duke. So it would appear the Tars have their work cut out for them. The Middies are not playing up to the class of last year's team, but they loom as an up and coming outfit.

The Navy plebes will open their season on Saturday meeting Eastern High, of Washington.

To the winner of the Central-Tech melee goes the undisputed possession of first notch, till Friday at least; to the loser of the Roosevelt-Eastern tilt goes a basement berth alongside Western, which has failed to win in its two series starts.

Lebrot's Springsteel Impressive in Beating Easy Come in Tropical Park Feature

Gray Gelding Is Length Winner

Fervid Takes Third Race and Returns $63.30 for $2 Mutuel.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 15 (AP).—S. W. Labrot, whose horses have been conspicuous among the list of winners at the current meeting, was represented by another feature race victor here this afternoon when the gray gelding Springsteel, following a rest since the Maryland fall season, whirled to an impressive score in the 6 furlongs of the Dunedin Handicap. Packing 120 pounds, the 5-year-old covered the six panels in the speedy time of 1:11 flat to beat Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Easy Come by a length, handily. J. E. Smallman's Feudal Lord was a head out of the place position. The winner paid $11.

The week began dismally for favorite players. Easy Come, with Porter up, could bring no relief, especially after losing ground at the stretch turn. Jimmie Burke rode Springsteel faultlessly. He saved something for the final drive while making Character stop after a duel lasting a half mile. The gray began to draw away entering the home lane, where Easy Come, after a sluggish beginning, moved up ominously on the outside. Springsteel, fit and fresh, held the favorite under control without being fully extended. Feudal Lord was always assured of third money.

New Track Record.

Albuquerque, a gelded son of Monks Way—pleasure bred and owned by former Jockey Jack Howard, established a new track record for 3 furlongs in winning the "baby" race, first on the card. It was the youngster's first start and he made form players wish he had been kept in the barn, for he handed a one-length trouncing to No Saint, which recently created a new track mark of 35 flat in his debut. Albuquerque clipped a fifth of a second off that figure. Abner was third, 5 additional lengths away.

No Saint, confidently backed at 1 to 4, stole a length lead in the first furlong but Bobby Jones, back in the saddle following a brief absence caused by a kick in the leg, had to go to a drive as Albuquerque charged up fast entering the stretch. The latter drew clear in a hard drive. The winner paid $29.80.

Croon Wins Second.

Silvio Coucci, who is riding in his best form these days, put up a particularly good ride on the well-backed Croon to account for the second purse. Lester Balaski, back in action with the end of his ten-day suspension, drove Knights Hope to the place, three parts of a length behind and a half length before Eurydice. Croon was on top from end to end, but she never could get clear and it took smart handling to bring the filly home at $8.30 for $2.

Fervid raced in front all the way in the third race, a 6 furlongs dash, to win by two lengths at $63.30 for $2. With two long shots comprising the winning combination, the daily double reached a high mark payoff of $2,642.40. Premeditate saved the place from Don't Blush by a half length. Apprentice R. Merritt rode a capable, cool race on the winner, which held Premeditate safe throughout to score in a mild drive.

Kiltamond Pays $14.

Kiltamond, one of 11 maiden platers in the fourth contest, graduated with a bang at the lucrative price of $14. The filly was off last, got to the front around the final bend and won by all of ten lengths from Polisher. Twidgets lost the place by a half length. Phil Sage, Saratoga boy who piloted Polisher, received a ten-day suspension for rough riding around the first turn.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

What was perhaps the forerunner of the modern gangster and racketeer existed 800 years ago in the form of the Assassins, a secret semi-religious order which was organized in the twelfth century. Strangely like the modern gang, there was one chief—the first was Hassan ben Sabbah, who had supreme authority. Under him were lieutenants, but the younger men who did the killing did not know the reason for their numerous "jobs." They only knew that the "big boy" or "Old Man of the Mountains" as he was called by the eleventh century gangster, had ordered this person or that one assassinated.

The Assassins were so well organized that they were able to extract tribute from merchants and princes for "protection." Their services were available to any who could pay for them, and it sometimes happened that opposing political factions each hired the Assassins to aid them.

For 150 years the Assassins held Persia in their grip. In 1256, however, the Mongols rounded up 12,000 of them, including their chief, and put them all to death—thus breaking up gang rule in Persia. The Syrian branch of the Assassins remained active in later years, and some say that small bands of them still linger in the mountains of Syria.

Too Much Cash Is Worrying Gophers

MINNEAPOLIS (AP). — University of Minnesota athletic treasury officials are wearing worried looks these days—but it's not because of a lack of cash. Rather, from too much of it!

The perplexity arises from wondering on what enterprise they'll spend their money after the new $350,000 sports building is constructed to round out a $2,000,000 athletic plant.

Unofficial estimates placed this year's net profits from Gopher football at $185,000—after all expenses and splits with opponents were taken care of.

The athletic department here hasn't been in debt for three years, when it finished paying for the $650,000 fieldhouse, one of the largest in the country. Prior to that it had cleaned up all obligations incurred in building its $900,000 stadium, which seats 55,000.

And now, with an estimated $125,000 cash on hand and a grant from the Public Works Administration of $86,000, the university will soon begin construction of its $350,000 sports building, to be placed at the open end of the stadium. The balance of the money will be raised by issuing certificates of indebtedness.

The building will have two large swimming pools, the varsity tank having stands seating 1,500 spectators. It will also contain administration offices, showers, locker rooms for gridders, training quarters, gymnasium, four basket ball courts and facilities for numerous other endeavors.

That, maybe, will solve the "too much cash" problem, for a couple of years, at least.

Iowa Winner at Home.

The University of Iowa's win over Wisconsin rounded out a full calendar year in which the Hawkeye basketers were not defeated on their home court, meanwhile registering 11 successive wins there.

Evans, Gardner Give 'the Razz' To Westland, Walker Cupper

CHICAGO, Jan. 1' (AP).—If Jack Westland doesn't make a good showing on America's Walker Cup team during the international golf matches at St. Andrews next May, he'd better learn to duck before he comes back to work at La Salle street investment house.

Working in the same office with Jack, each within easy kicking and speaking distance, are Charles (Chick) Evans, jr., and Robert A. Gardner, a pair of golf's most renowned champions and Walker Cup players of the past. Each has won the National amateur crown twice and competed on three victorious Walker Cup teams. Together, they openly promise to hatch a "dastardly plot" with Jack as the victim if he and his mates fail to keep the international team trophy on this side of the Atlantic.

Life just hasn't been the same for Jack, a young fellow who takes his golf dead serious, since he was advised that he had been chosen to play on the 1934 Walker Cup team. Chick, whose winning total of 286 in the National Open at Minikahda back in 1916 never has been broken, and Bob have kept up a rapid fire of taunts, razzing and threats from that day on. Several times the big boss of the office stumbled in on their incessant discussion of golf only to toss up his hands and leave Jack to battle it out.

"You guys probably will lose this year," chimes in Chick. "When Bob and I played 'em, the team always won. You've got twice as many clubs as we had, but, like the rest of the younger generation, you can't play like we used to."

"Yeah, when we won championships and the Walker Cup we had only seven clubs," Bob Gardner joined in with a wink to Chick. "We had to play the touch system. You play the machine system. We didn't have the fast balls you have to sock with and we had to use quarter, half, three-quarter, and even six-sevenths swings. You fellows have a club for every shot."

"Say, have a heart," Westland shot back. "The best I've ever done in the National Amateur is to finish second, so I guess I can't talk back; but, say, lay off, will you?"

Right then and there Chick and Bob decided that they'd be looking for their office pal around the bunkers and traps of Brookline, Mass., in the 1934 National Amateur.

"We're both entering and will be fresh as a couple of daisies because we won't have to qualify at all now, with the new rules permitting former champs to get in without firing a shot," Chick said. "Who knows, maybe the 1934 National Amateur will be for the championship of this office!"

King's Taste

Runs to Game Birds; Also Afoul of the Law.

Minot, N. Dak. (AP).—"King," a tame coyote, went to jail because he disregarded man-made hunting laws, and his master faces charges of violating the State game laws.

Charles J. Johnson and his pet coyote were taken into custody following complaints that the animal had been catching prairie chickens and partridges for his master.

Shortly after the arrest of the man and his pet "King" freed himself from the bar to which he was tied at the county jail and escaped.

"I'm an old man and we were great pals," Johnson said. "'King' certainly has always behaved well."

Previously, Johnson was arrested because "King" sought out a skunk and killed it. Because he did not have a trapping license Johnson was arrested and sentenced to five days in jail, but serving of the sentence was deferred.

Cadet Quintet in 4 Games This Week

To Meet Virginia Tonight; Boxers and Rasslers Face Contests.

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 15 (Spl.).—This week's sport card will be a crowded one for V. M. I. athletes. Beginning tomorrow, five Cadet teams will engage in a total of ten contests at home and on the road.

Coach Bill Raftery's varsity basketeers have drawn the heaviest assignment, with four games in five nights. Tomorrow the Cadets entertain Virginia in Ninety-four Hall. On the next two evenings they will be in North Carolina, meeting North Carolina in a return game on Wednesday and tackling Duke on Thursday. Returning to the home floor, the Cadets will play Richmond on Saturday in the last game before a two weeks' layoff during the midyear examinations.

The first-year cagers also will meet Virginia here tomorrow. On the next day they will go to Staunton for a game with Staunton Military Academy. On Friday they will play hosts to Greenbrier Military School.

Boxers to Invade.

Coach Al Martin will take his varsity and freshman boxers to University Saturday to meet Virginia. The varsity team, with Capt. George Bain and Jim Troutt the only veterans, received seasoning in the opening meet with Maryland. It will be the first competition for the first-year boxers. Rosser Eastham, of Charlottesville; Beverley Whittle, of Norfolk, and Bill Kane, of Upper Darby, N. J., are among the leading freshman candidates.

The varsity wrestlers, with the Davidson meet behind them, are hard at work in preparation for their Friday engagement with N. C. State at Raleigh. The first-year grapplers will not get into action until they go to the mat with the Navy Plebes at Annapolis on February 3.

Friends Withdraw Petition For Hyman Reinstatement

THE petition for the reinstatement of Louis "Rube" Hayman, star athlete of Central High School, into school sports was of short duration.

With the closing of classes last Friday, two student friends of the barred athlete undertook to obtain signatures of the student body, contending that the penalty inflicted on Hayman was too severe. Yesterday morning the move was reported to Dr. Harvey A. Smith, principal of Central High School, who summoned the petition purveyors for a short conference. The two students decided to withdraw the recommendation.

According to Dr. Smith, no petition will be forthcoming.

Hayman was banned by the Board of High School Principals for striking John McLean, Tech student and member of the football team, following the Western-Central basket ball game last Tuesday. The occurrence resulted when a group of Tech students, supposedly led by McLean, "razzed" Hayman and his teammates during the game.

NO SAINT was away winging, saved ground, but quit badly in final sixteenth. ABNER broke fast, but could not hold his position, dropped back, but was best of the others. SKIPPY McGEE finished gamely. Stocks Jump As Dollar Plan Is Clarified

Leaders Gain 2 to 6 Points as Sales Mount to 3,745,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Financial markets reacted with emphatic strength today to President Roosevelt's proposals for a dollar of 50 to 60 per cent of its old parity, nationalization of monetary gold and establishment of a two billion equalization fund.

Disparity Is Reduced.

The disparity which had existed between indicated gold values on the basis of the Treasury gold price and the gold standard currencies of Europe was sharply reduced, especially after Washington had announced that this Government's yellow metal quotation was being lifted to $34.45 where the currency's gold level would be almost exactly the 60 per cent of parity which is apparently the Administration's goal at this time.

The advance in markets had several explanations. One was that even though stabilization was still something for the future uncertainties as to the dollar's future value had been restricted, which should make for business confidence.

Again, it was suggested that the 60 per cent upper limit represented a somewhat cheaper dollar than the country has been unofficially having.

Also, the point was made that the prospective action should prove to be stabilizing in effect since the Government will be in a position to exercise firm control over foreign exchange fluctuations at a time when it is preparing to do its record-breaking peace time financing. Differences of opinion were heard as to whether 60 cents was too high or too low, but the consensus seemed to be that even without formal stabilization of devaluation—which presumably will have to wait for international negotiations—troublesome uncertainities had been removed.

News of Recovery.

Routine news of the day strengthened the evidence of business recovery. Steel operations, said the Iron and Steel Institute, have advanced to 34.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 30.7 a week ago, duplicating the December high.

Producers were said to feel that a 50 per cent top is likely to be reached this quarter, with a better rate possible if consumers again hasten to specify as they did last quarter. Another favorable straw in the wind was the continued expansion of freight traffic. Roads reported for last week showed heavier volume than a year ago, and liberal gains over New Year's week.

Buying in stocks was broadly distributed. Steel, motors, chemicals and rails were notably strong. U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, National Steel, Chrysler, Nash, General Motors, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, and Illinois Central jumped roughly 2 to more than 4 points; Allied Chemical had a net gain of 6⅞, Dupont a point less. Utilities got stout leadership from American Telephone, up 5 net, as President Gifford reported an improvement in business. Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey improved 3 or so; in the same general range were American Can, Westinghouse and U. S. Smelting. Sales totaled 3,745,000 shares, the largest since last July.

Robey's Review

By Ralph West Robey.

President Roosevelt's message to Congress on monetary policy settles several points. The basic uncertainties that have prevailed in our currency system, nevertheless, still remain. We still do not know at what point we are to have stabilization. The road is left wide open for further devaluation and further experimentation along the line of a commodity dollar.

The points which are settled can be stated in brief terms. The first is that when, as, and if, stabilization is decided upon it shall be at not more than a 60-cent dollar. This means that gold will have a value by statute of not less than $34.44 an ounce as contrasted with the present statutory price of $20,67. Second, it is proposed that the United States shall adopt—again when, as, and if, stabilization occurs—what may be termed a restricted gold bullion standard. Under the usual gold bullion standard convertibility of the currency into gold is maintained, but a definite minimum is set, say, $5,000. If one wants to make conversion of at least this amount he can do so, but if he has less than this it is impossible to exchange his currency or bank deposits into an equivalent amount of metal. Under the plan proposed by the President the conversion would be further limited and one would be able to get gold only to meet international payments.

All Gold to Be Taken By the Government.

Third, it is proposed, in order to prepare the way for the eventual establishment of this restricted gold bullion standard, that the Government shall take title to all gold in the country, including that now held by the Federal Reserve System. Fifth, to pay for this gold, currency is to be issued—"gold certificates." This will be given to the Reserve Banks and be used by them, rather than the metal, as a reserve against their liabilities.

Fourth, through an immediate devaluation to 60 cents—the minimum that Congress is asked is to make mandatory—the Treasury will get a so-called profit, amounting to the difference between a 60-cent and a 100-cent dollar. On the basis of $4,000,000,000 of gold this will be approximately $2,666,000,000.

Fifth, and finally, it is proposed that $2,000,000,000 of this profit shall be set aside as a "stabilization" fund to be used by the Secretary of the Treasury to buy and sell gold and foreign exchange either domestically or abroad. The purpose of such purchases is to control the value of the dollar in terms of foreign currencies.

All of these provisions are, in a way, fairly definite. In a word they mean preliminary devaluation, confiscation of the so-called gold profit, issuance of paper money and calling it "gold certificates," and control of the foreign exchanges. This in itself sounds like a pretty extensive program. Nevertheless it fails completely to touch the two basic elements in the monetary system.

Must Know Future Plans For Value of the Dollar.

The first of these basic points is the plans for the future of the dollar. It is not sufficient merely to know that the dollar henceforth will—have a gold content of not more than 60 per cent of our old dollar. We also must know the lower limit as well, and if there is to be confidence these limits must be close together. On this point we are just as much in the dark as we were before the President delivered his message.

The second basic point not adequately clarified is the conditions under which currency is to be issued. The President, it is true, indicates there is to be dollar for dollar coverage, but this is not enough. Dollar for dollar coverage means little against a shifting value for gold and even less if the currency is not convertible into gold. The assurance given by the President accordingly leaves the whole question of currency issue up in the air.

Until we get some light on these points we can not consider that our monetary policy is clear. As it is now we are about as much in need of a statement clarifying our monetary program as we were before the President delivered his message.

$12,295,776 Placed In Circulation Here

American life insurance companies placed approximately $12,295,776 into circulation in Washington, D. C., during 1933, according to an estimate just made public by F. V. McNair, American Security Building, local representative of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co.

"For the fifth consecutive year," Mr. McNair explained, "total life insurance payments to living policyholders and beneficiaries have scored an increase, thereby establishing the life insurance industry as one of the chief contributing factors to the economic stability of the Nation.

"Total payments in 1933 were $3,100,000,000, a slight gain over the figure of $3,087,000,000 in 1932, and a larger gain over the total of $2,607,000,000 in 1931. The estimate for Washington, D. C., is simply based on comparative population statistics in the absence of specific figures at this time."

Foreign Markets.

London, Jan. 15 (A.P.).—The stock exchange started the week somewhat quieter today. Investment stocks yielded on profittaking but speculative shares were supported and caffirs strengthened on the firmer French franc. Transatlantic issues and oil shares also improved owing to favorable American advices. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Awaiting President Roosevelt's statement regarding his monetary policy, trading on the bourse was hesitant and dull with prices fairly resistant. Rentes were weak. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was dull pending President Roosevelt's monetary decision. Prices registered slight declines and closed unsettled.

Bonds Follow Other Marts To High Level

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Bonds of all classes followed stocks in a bouyant upward thrust today as President Roosevelt sent his message to Congress calling for a 50-60-cent dollar.

While the most pronounced gains were recorded by secondary loans, so-called high grade issues were relatively steady and U. S. Government securities rallied briskly.

Bonds of the gold standard countries also spurted as the dollar slumped in terms of leading foreign exchanges.

Dollar Views Divided.

Traders and investors were not entirely in agreement on the managed currency proposal, but the intention of holding the dollar's value to within a 10-cent range was received with much interest. The financial district apparently was not surprised by the devaluation recommendation, but the idea of creating a $2,000,000,000 exchange equalization fund out of the profits to be realized from devaluation had not been generally forecast.

Although scattered industrials recorded wide gains, the best performance was given by the rails and utilities.

Among the most active carrier liens, with gains of 1 to around 4 points, were some of Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Central Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Rock Island, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Southern, Texas & Pacific, Wabash, Western Maryland and Western Pacific.

Utilities Among Gainers.

Utility gainers of 1 to around 3 included loans of American Waterworks, Columbia Gas, International Telephone, Laclede Gas, New Orleans Public Service, North American, North American Edison, Philadelphia Co., Portland General Electric, and Utilities Power & Light.

Among the better industrials were United Drug 5s, up 4; Republic Steel 5½s, up 4½; Otis Steel 6s, up 4½; Paramount-Publix 5½s, up 3½; McKessen 5½s, up 2; Armour 4½s and 5½, up around a point each; American Rolling Mill 5s, up 2¾ and American Beet Sugar 6s, up ¾.

The turnover in the Federal section amounted to only about $3,600,000, but advances ranged from 4-32nds to 29-32nds of a point. The principal activity and largest gains were in the Treasuries.

Dutch East Indies Jump.

Dutch East Indies obligations jumped 5 to 7 points and French Government 7s and 7½s were up 5 and 6⅞ points, respectively. Other foreign recoveries included Swiss Government 5½s, up 4½; Leipzig City 7s, up 5; Lautaro Nitrate 6s, up 3½; Berlin 6½s, up 4, and Lyons City 6s, up 5⅝.

Some of the Germans, British, Argentines, Australians and Norwegians were 1 to 2 points higher.

Sales totaled $24,861,000, par value, the largest aggregate since July 7, last, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues moved up nine-tenths of a point to 78.1.

Wheat Soars On Roosevelt's Money Plans

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Soaring 4¼ cents and setting a new high price record, wheat today took on spectacular broadening of activity simultaneous with President Roosevelt's latest financial proposals.

Most grain traders looked upon the message as removing to a great extent the doubts which through a long period had served as a handicap to higher prices and to enlargement of dealings.

Despite heavy profit taking sales on upturns in values, the wheat market displayed unabated buoyancy in late transactions, and ended within ½ cent of the day's top.

Wheat Closes Strong.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 3½ to 4⅛ cents above Saturday's finish; corn, ⅞ to 1⅜ up; oats, 1 to 1¾ advanced, and provision at 20 to 37 cents gain.

Waves of buying orders, early and late swept into the grain pits, shooting wheat values up 3⅛ cents in the first minute of trading, and skyrocketing the market more than a cent higher yet as the day approached an end.

Highest prices reached for all grains came after notice was received that the United States Treasury would hoist gold values tomorrow to a material extent. Other factors than monetary moves at Washington were given relatively scant attention, aside from a reduction of 3,217,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply, bringing the total down to the lowest point since last June.

Stimulus to Buyers.

A special stimulus to buyers was the fact that for the first time in a long while the wheat market had risen to above 90 cents a bushel for all deliveries. Heretofore, it had seemed almost impossible for wheat to get out of the eighties.

The new high price record for wheat was in September contracts, which outdid their previous top for the season. A contributing influence in market strength today was apparent likelihood of a severe fall of temperature soon Northwest with no immediate moisture relief in prospect for domestic winter wheat territory Southwest.

Corn and oats followed the upward flight of wheat prices, although hampered by enlarged receipts of corn. Today's primary arrivals of corn totaled nearly double those of a week ago. Provisions advanced with hog values and with grains.

German Issue Of New Books Is Decreasing

That the prevailing economic conditions has notably curtailed the output of books in Germany is revealed in a report from Vice Consul C. T. Zawadriki, Berlin, made public by the Commerce Department.

Whereas in prewar times, the report shows, over 35,000 new books were published in Germany annually, production for the year 1932 had dropped to less than 21,000, a decline of 11 per cent, as compared with the preceding year.

Germans authored 20,607, or 90 per cent, of the total number of books newly published in Germany during 1932; 986 of these were translations from foreign languages, mostly from English, Russian and French. Publications in foreign languages numbered 845 books, these being mainly French, English and Latin.

The dominating role in the German book production is played by general literature, which accounts for almost 15 per cent of all the books published in Germany. Religious books, schoolbooks, books on law and technical and medical books account for a large part of the total.

Imports of Gold Into London Rise

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—Official figures yesterday revealed that net imports of gold into London last year totaled $985,000,000, nine times as much as in 1932.

The greater part of this vast sum is held by British banks in trust for foreign account. Bankers here said it represented both confidence in London and nervousness in foreign countries over their own banking and currency systems.

After a period of steady growth, the returns for December showed exports of British goods totaled $152,000,000 or $20,000,000 below November and $10,000,000 under December of 1932. Imports remained practically the same at $315,000,000.

Iron and Steel Plants Cheered By Prospects

Cleveland, Jan. 15.—Heavier awards by the railroads and building industry, plus moderate expansion in purchasing by automobile manufacturers and miscellaneous consumers, support the general feeling of encouragement among iron and steel producers, states the magazine Steel.

This improvement, not all of which has yet reached the mills, foreshadows a reversal of the trend in steel production, off 1 point last week to 30 per cent.

New orders booked by some leading steel interests so far this month are ahead of the tonnage placed in the comparable period in December. One of the brightest features of the industrial picture, expected to be translated into orders for steel and steel products shortly, is the evident increase in purchasing power in agricultural areas.

Auto Trade Working Out.

The automobile industry is slowly working out of its production difficulties, but still is far behind schedules for January, insuring that February and March will be correspondingly stronger months. There seems to be no doubt this delay is due to mechanical problems, and not a reflection on markets.

Railroad business is developing more rapidly. Santa Fe has placed 33,000 tons of rails, and will buy 10,000 tons of fastenings shortly. Missouri Pacific has purchased 25,000 tons of rails. St. Louis & San Francisco is to buy 26,000 tons of rails early in February; Bangor & Aroostook, 1,200 tons of fastenings.

Delay in getting the carbuilders' code approved is holding up some pending car lists which are being financed by the PWA. Bids for heavy tonnages of steel in the Pennsylvania's equipment program are to be taken this week, with opening under the Clayton act in ten days, indicating awards early in February. These include 75,000 tons of steel for 6,500 freight cars.

More Industrial Building.

More industrial building projects are noted in structural steel awards for the week, which rose to 28,252 tons. The largest reinforcing bar order in many weeks, 3,500 tons, was placed for a spillway bridge at Bonnet Carre, La. For two tankers for the Standard Vacuum Transportation Co., New York, 11,400 tons of plates, shapes and bars have been purchased.

American producers are expecting to take 25,000 tons of cast iron pipe for Mexico City, and 9,000 tons for Vera Cruz, Mex., announcement of which is expected daily. Government financing is speeding up work on the Hetch Hetchy, California, water project, requiring 17,000 tons of cast pipe and 17,000 tons of welded steel pipe.

Pig iron sales and inquiries are improving much earlier than anticipated. Gradual gains in foundry operations are reflected in increasing coke shipments. Scrap prices continue to rise, steel's composite being up 21 cents to $11.08; the sixth consecutive weekly advance registering a total gain of $1.75.

Ingot Yield Higher.

Daily average steel ingot production for December, 72,786 gross tons, was 22.6 per cent higher than in November. The month's total of 1,819,648 tons brought the output for last year to 22,878,571 tons, compared with 13,322,833 tons in 1932, and 25,192,715 tons in 1931.

Finished steel shipments by the United States Steel Corporation last month increased 39 per cent over November to 600,639 tons. For the year, the corporation's shipments were 5,760,952 tons, 1,786,890 tons more than in 1932.

Demand for finished steel is gaining considerable impetus in Great Britain, according to Steel's cablegram. Russia is reported to have purchased 36,000 tons of steel products in Poland. Certain Washington officials look for Russia to be a heavy buyer in the near future, estimating steel requirements for its railroad program as 7,000,000 tons for cars and locomotives, and 3,270,000 tons of rails.

Steelworks operations advanced 6 points to 62 per cent in the Wheeling district, and 3 to 54 at Cleveland. They dropped 7 points to 88 in New England; 2 to 32 at Chicago; 1 to 21 at Pittsburgh; 1 to 21½ in eastern Pennsylvania; and 6 to 26 at Youngstown; continuing 79 at Detroit; 52, Birmingham; and 29, Buffalo.

Steel's iron and steel composite remains $32.42; and the finished steel composite, $51.10.

Suspect Freed In Lawrence Home Robbery

Victims Fail to Identify Former Convict in $25,000 Holdup.

A former convict, held as a suspect in the $15,000 robbery of Mrs. Mortimer Lawrence, and her son, Marcus, wealthy Washingtonians, was released yesterday when victims of the holdup failed to identify him.

Mrs. Lawrence, in a previous visit to police headquarters, picked the rogues' gallery picture of Henry Clay Harris, colored, 37, as bearing a resemblance to one of the three bandits who invaded her home, 2161 Wyoming avenue northwest, Saturday night.

Harris was arrested at his home, 3401 South street northwest, by Policeman W. T. G. Mills, of the Seventh Precinct. He was held throughout yesterday, and released only when Mrs. Lawrence, her son and Mary Duskins, a maid, were unable to identify him.

Police said Harris had a criminal record. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison for robbery, serving 6 years in the Atlanta Penitentiary and 4 at Lorton Reformatory. He was released from Lorton last November.

Mrs. Lawrence and her son were locked in a closet while the bandits ransacked the house. The maid was bound before the robbers fled with their loot. Two of them, police were told, were white and the third colored. They were admitted by the maid when she answered their knock at the front door.

$30,000 Threat Case Judgment Reversed

Kuhn, jr., from William Van Doren Wright, president of the Edgewater Steel Co.; Alexander Jamie and Edgar Dudley, of the "Secret Six," in a case growing out of four extortion notes received by Wright's daughter, Marion.

Roswell, N. Mex., Jan. 15 (AP).—C. L. Covel and his five children ranging in age from 7 to 13 were burned to death today in their home near Chavez, N. Mex. Physicians attending Mrs. Covel held little hope for her recovery.

The fire was believed to have started when Mrs. Covel spilled coal oil on her dress as she lighted a fire in the stove.

Radio Waves and Ripples

IT looks like WJSV minds will have to be made up independently, if at all, on the matter of rebroadcasting police calls.

Public opinion on the subject as represented by yesterday morning's mail is divided evenly and sharply. There is no middle ground. Police calls apparently are the sort of thing you either like or dislike, inherently.

One school of thought finds them brightening an otherwise ordinary evening of dance music. These are the people who like to keep up on what's going on in the Police Department.

Then there is the case of the young man who, with the aid of Guy Lombardo, was wooing the young lady of his heart with success in sight until the slow, rhythmic strains of "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?" were broken by "Alexandria cruiser No. 1, man lying in street. • • •"

The young man said he put on his hat and coat and went home, pretty much upset.

A lonely Columbia, S. C., mother listening to WMAL the other day thought she had found her boy.

She sat down and wrote a letter, addressing it to "Robert Yobs, National Broadcasting Co., Washington, D. C."

The letter was turned over to Robert Youse, WMAL announcer, whose job it will be to tell her he's sorry Youse sounded like Yobs in Columbia.

Arthur Godfrey is issuing licenses to listen instead of breakfast club certificates now that he has taken over morning broadcasting for WJSV.

N. B. C. has taken a long lead on Columbia by preparing now for a broadcast of the presidential review of the fleet in New York Harbor in June.

Company engineers are working with Navy authorities to radio the spectacle from President Roosevelt's flagship and from the cabin of the Macon. It will be the first New York fleet review since the end of the World War.

It was for the broadcasting of President Hoover's review at Hampton Roads, Va., in 1930 that N. B. C.'s engineers first worked out the so-called "open" style of radioing between several points, which permits announcers to pick up the description from each other without pausing to clear through the central control. We don't exactly understand this ourselves, but it makes an uninterrupted broadcast from several points possible.

Here is "The Tattered Man" who tells stories to your children every Tuesday afternoon on N. B. C. Outside the studio his name is Robert Straus.

N. B. C. has a program in the making called "The Weaker Sex," which it hopes will be run entirely by women.

They're trying now to assemble an orchestra of women. At least there'll be a female ensemble group and all the principal participants will be of the fair sex with a leader in women's affairs the "master" of ceremonies.

The announcer will be Claudine MacDonald, who runs the Women's Radio Review and who recently became the only lady announcer on the networks.

The Washington Parent-Teacher Association and the White House will be host today and tomorrow to John Martin, N. B. C.'s children story-teller.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt introduced Martin to radio audiences some months ago. Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall has invited him to the White House to draw "quizz-wizz" pictures for "Buzzie" and "Sistie."

Choral programs are piled high on the N. B. C. schedule this week if the regular choir broadcasts are counted.

Outstanding among the special broadcasters are the St. Louis Symphonic Choir and the Ithaca College and Capella Choir. The college group, a 70-voice choir heard on N. B. C. last month in a special Christmas concert, will go on the air Thursday night at 6:30 o'clock. The St. Louis unit is scheduled for a half-hour broadcast starting at 6 o'clock tonight.

In addition there's the regular Wesminister Choir broadcast tomorrow night at 6, the N. B. C. Music Appreciation Hour Friday morning, the Radio City Music Hall Chorus and the Russian Symphonic Choir Sunday morning and Father Finn's Choral Music Monday night.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, founder of the National Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, and Mrs. Corbett Ashby, the only woman member of the British delegation to the disarmament conference, come to C. B. S. microphones in behalf of peace this week. Mrs. Catt will be heard in "The Outlook for Peace" at 4:30 this afternoon, Mrs. Ashby broadcasting Thursday morning at 10:45.

U. S. Instructs Caffery to Act On Utilities

(Associated Press.)

Seizure and operation by the Cuban government of the properties of the American-owned Cuban Electric Co. will be "discussed" with Cuban officials by Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal envoy in Havana.

The Acting Secretary of State, William Phillips, announced late yesterday that Caffrey had been given "appropriate instructions" concerning the seizure of the electric company's plants on the island after S. J. Mahoney, president of the company, had protested the seizure.

Caution Exercised.

The State Department, officials said, is exercising extreme caution in dealing with Cuban affairs because of the present crisis in the island's political situation.

Mahoney, during his conference with Phillips, explained the viewpoint of his company, an affiliate of the Electric Bond and Share Co., and protested the Cuban government's action in taking over the properties after a general strike of employes and shutdown of the plants which threw the entire island into darkness last night.

Service Restored.

Caffery reported to the State Department that service was resumed after the government had taken over the plants. In acting, he said, the government cited failure of the company and union to agree on employes' demands and alleged noncompliance by the company with an "accepted agreement."

Caffery's report described the seizure as "provisional intervention" and said the decree provided for government operation as long as "may be judged necessary by the executive." Until an agreement is reached with labor all expenses incurred are to be charged against the company.

The Cuban Electric Co. owns plants and property estimated in value at $200,000,000.

New Year Courage.

The New Year is sailing right merrily on and most of the wailing in stifled and gone. The most of the weeping we try to abate and people are keeping their courage on straight. There's something that's bracing about a new year; it's shooing and chasing our worry and fear. We say while we're burning our new year cheroots, "The luck's had a turning, we'll wager our boots; we feel more like humping in excellent shape; we feel more like dumping our cargo of crape. The new year inspires us and makes us feel gay, ambition now fires us to put up some hay. The blooming year tells us it's well worth the price; the new year impels us to start cutting ice." The old year went reeling away to its tomb and now we are feeling the absence of gloom. An ancient year bores us, it seems such a frost; the new year restores us to confidence lost. I don't know the reason why this should be so, but know at this season we shake off our woe; we feel that the shackles are torn from our limbs, we utter glad cackles, sing jubilant hymns. The sad, doubting Thomas has faith in his heart, the year's full of promise, his troubles depart.
